45,000 Face Call to Army By February In Draft Hike

20,000 Requested After Holidays To Keep Training Camps at Capacity

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday asked Selective Service to draft 20,000 men in January, bringing to 45,000 the number facing call during the next three months.

Officials said the January call was boosted beyond November and December totals because the normal Christmas holiday drop in recruiting will leave training camps short of capacity.

The announcement from the Office of Defense said that draft calls beyond January will depend on the enlistment rate and money available. However, Army personnel officers said the voluntary recruiting rate still is high and the February call may be cut to 15,000.

Last spring, during hearings on selective service, Army chiefs declared that 35,000 men a month probably would be called. A continuing high rate of volunteers now brings forecasts of about half this number the remainder of the fiscal year.

The defense office said Selective Service Headquarters would break down the 20,000-man call into quotas for the 48 States, District of Columbia and Territories. State headquarters will, in turn, levy calls on local boards.

Again there were no calls by the Navy, Marine Corps or Air Force. All three services expect to be able to meet their personnel needs by voluntary enlistment.

Army personnel officials again called attention to opportunity for enlisted war veterans with one year's service who have had two years of college to be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Reserve. The Army will need 23,000 additional lieutenants this year. Successful applicants will be called to 24 months' active duty.

D. C. Lines Up 55 For November Draft

District Selective Service officials have lined up the 55 Washingtonians to fill the November draft call.

The first men to be drafted (a group of nine or ten) will report to the Army and Air Force recruiting stations at 8:30 a. m. next Tuesday. Similar groups will report there on subsequent Tuesdays through November for induction, Frank D. Norton, deputy D. C. draft director, said.

Based on the November and December calls, Norton said that as many as 110 District draft registrants could be called up in December.

All draftees from the District, Maryland, Virginia and other Middle Atlantic States will be sent to Camp Pickett, Va., for basic training, Lieut. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Second Army commander, has announced.

3 Women, 5 Men Seized In Raid On Apartment

Three women and five men were arrested in a third-floor apartment at 812 10th st. nw. last night.

Vice squad members said the apartment consisted of three bedrooms, living room, kitchen and bath.

Mrs. Viola Saunders, 50, of the 10th st. address, was charged with operating a disorderly house and vagrancy. Also charged with vagrancy were Mrs. Juanita O'Connor, 28, who gave her occupation as a housewife, and Mrs. Vivian Ray, 37, who said she was a clerk. Both gave 812 10th st. nw. as their address.

The five men were taken to police headquarters for questioning.

Kidnap Scare Follows Ride For Girl, 5

It may have been an impromptu Sunday afternoon ride in the park for 5-year-old Mary Ann McMillan, but such absence meant only kidnaping for aroused police, parents and neighbors.

It happened this way:

Mary Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. McMillan, 7 Leighton pl., Silver Spring, Md., was playing near her home. DeWitt Puckett, 47, of 2322 40th pl. nw., a Federal Trade Commission attorney, was waiting for some friends in a parked car nearby. When the two struck up a friendship, Puckett took the little girl for a ride.

A neighbor, however, saw them and, fearing the child was being kidnaped, called police. The child's parents and police searched the area, flashed the car's license number and descriptions to police in the whole area. Neighbors gathered in excited huddles to join the search.

Puckett and the child returned to find an angry crowd. Some say they had been gone 40 minutes but Puckett says it was less.

Someone punched Puckett in the face. Detective Corp. Glenn Wood said there might have been more violence if he had not been there.

Puckett was taken to the police station. The child was taken to a physician and pronounced unmolested. Puckett was charged with drunken driving. A friend and fellow attorney, P. Bryan Morehouse, got him freed on $101.45 bail for a hearing November 9.

Mary Ann's father is manager of the Warner Theater, 13th and E sts. nw.

Dorsey, Md., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Mrs. Irma Little, 31, was crossing the railroad tracks near her home here tonight. A speeding Washington to Baltimore train hurtled out of the darkness. She is survived by her husband, John, and a small son.

Deliberates for 9 Hours

Abortion Trial Jury Dismissed For Night, Meets Again Today

A District Court jury, after being out nine hours, was unable to reach a verdict last night in the abortion trial of Dr. Schley Brown, 47, physician with offices at 237 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut dismissed the jury for the night at 9:23 p. m. It will resume deliberations at 10 a. m. today.

Brown is charged with having performed an abortion September 19, 1947, on Miss Lee Jeanette LoFaro, 24-year-old typist, who says she was then four months pregnant.

The case went to the jury at 12:29 p. m. Dinner recess was from 6 to 7 p. m. The jurors were recalled to court at 8:27 p. m. to hear Judge Schweinhaut read the Allen charge.

The Allen charge advises jurors of the minority opinion to examine the evidence with a view to agreeing with the majority. Jurors are advised to try to determine why the majority, persons of presumably equal intelligence, are on the other side. They are told, however, not to change their vote if their conscience forbids.

The jury resumed deliberations, then returned to court at 9:21 p. m. where the foreman stated there was a fairly good chance of agreement. Judge Schweinhaut then dismissed the jury for the night.

The trial which opened Wednesday was the fourth time Dr. Brown has been charged here with performing illegal operations. Twice juries were unable to agree and these cases are to be retried. Another time the United States attor-

GOP Works With Reds, Says Truman

President Compares Opposing 'Interests' To Supporters of Hitler and Mussolini

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Chicago, Oct. 25.—President Truman tonight opened the final battle in his campaign for reelection with a frontal attack on "powerful reactionary forces."

"It is not just a battle between two parties," he told 23,000 wildly cheering Democrats in Chicago Stadium. "It is a fight for the very soul of the American Government."

In his first of six major speeches before going to his Independence, Mo., home to vote November 2, Mr. Truman confidently predicted a Democratic victory. He foretold a shift of independent voters to the Democratic ranks which would "sweep back the forces that threaten democracy in this country."

GOP-Red Alliance Charged

"All over the Nation," he said, "I have seen unmistakable evidence that the American people are waking up to the tremendous issues which confront them in this election. We are sweeping toward victory."

At Garrett, Ind., where his special train made a service stop, Mr. Truman charged that the Republican Party had "joined up" with the "Communist-inspired third party" to defeat him in November. The GOP, he declared, and not his own party, had proved its friendship for the Communists who have "taken over the third party and are using it in a vain attempt to split the Democratic vote."

"We have proof," he declared, "that the Republicans financed the efforts of the third party to get on the Indiana ballot. And over in Illinois the Republicans are still trying to get the third party on the ballot. They even went to the Supreme Court of the United States.

"By their friends ye shall know them."

Noisy Chicago Welcome

Chicago Democrats outdid themselves to give Mr. Truman the biggest, wildest and noisiest reception of his strenuous two-month campaign. On his drive from Grand Central Station to the Blackstone Hotel he was showered with confetti and ticker tape.

But the 2½-mile drive to Chicago Stadium was an ovation. Madison st. from State st. to the stadium was packed from the building walls to the narrow lane through which Mr. Truman's automobile passed. The route was lighted by hundreds of red fuzees, searchlights fingered the sky, fireworks blazed in patriotic designs; torches, magnesium flares and sparklers blazed.

A few yelling partisans, bearing aloft cardboard placards, began following the procession and snowballed into a mob which swept bands and drum corps along in its wake. At least 100,000 persons were estimated to have seen the procession while 50,000 heard Mr. Truman from loudspeakers outside the stadium in addition to the 23,000 who packed it to capacity.

The President, introduced by Mayor Martin H. Kennelly, pre-

Dewey Off On Last Trip Of Campaign

Nominee Confident, Bids for Midwest Farm Vote; Talks In Chicago Tonight

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

En route to Chicago with Governor Dewey, Oct. 25.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey pulled out of Albany tonight on his third and last campaign tour in the confident mood of a man simply going through the electioneering motions.

But there was method in his third visit to the Midwest in as many campaign tours.

The farm vote, which has always been the hard core of Republican strength, will get some careful attention on this trip.

President Truman has been playing to farm restlessness over price trends and the current shortage of grain storage facilities, and there have been whisperings of some Republican concern.

There were no alarm signals flying as the Dewey special slipped out of Albany. The men around Dewey view this as the "wrap-it-up" trip. No campaign tour in recent history has seemed more anti-climactic.

Taking No Chances

But the super-cautious Dewey still isn't taking any chances, particularly with the Midwest farm center of his support.

Before swinging East again for the campaign's finale he will make major speeches in Chicago at 10 p. m., Eastern standard time, Tuesday, and in Cleveland at 9 p. m., Eastern standard time, Wednesday. He has announced merely that he will speak in Chicago on the interdependence of the three great elements in society—labor, business and agriculture—and propose Government policies "friendly" to each.

Save in the "it's-all-over" atmosphere, there was nothing about this trip that really differed from his two previous swings.

No departure is planned from the "high level" general-treatment-of-issues note on which the governor has campaigned to date.

As President Truman sharpened his attack on this strategy, Governor Dewey was reported more determined than ever not to get into personal combat.

Badge Color Changed

In fact, the only single contrast between this starter and the others is in the color of the badges handed staff members and reporters. On the first swing they were orange and on the second, blue. On this tour they are green.

Before leaving Albany, a ranking member of the governor's staff disclosed that Dewey has made no personal plans of any sort beyond election day—"not even for a vacation."

After his election—those around Dewey take that for granted—he is expected to continue in the governor's chair right up to January 19, inaugural eve, but his spokesmen won't even confirm that.

Newsmen are reading all sorts of implications into the fact that Dewey's plans are "open" after November 2. One is that the Governor might be open to an invitation for preinaugural consultation with the President on foreign and domestic problems.

Among Dewey's visitors today was Robert Menzies, former Prime Minister of Australia, who also recently conferred with Mr. Truman. Reporters asked Menzies how the governor felt about the election

Plea to Testify Seen Accepted

Grand Jury Votes on Hearing Thomas in 'Kickback' Probe

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Voting in secret session, a Federal grand jury yesterday decided whether to hear Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) testify in answer to charges that he received salary "kickbacks" from his office employes.

The jury agreed that its decision must remain a secret until Thomas is notified by mail of its answer to his request to be heard, but there was considerable informal speculation that the jury had decided to hear the testimony of the New Jersey Congressman.

Thomas, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, offered to waive his constitutional immunity from prosecution if he were allowed to give the grand jury his answer to published charges.

Thomas had earlier accepted as his "right" a Justice Department invitation to appear before the grand jurors. He denounced the inquiry as a "new low in politics."

The New Jersey Congressman, who is up for reelection November 2, suggested November 4, two days after the election, as a date to start the grand jury hearings in order "to keep this free of politics."

Thomas also asked that the right to testify be extended to members of his family, who, he said, "have been the subjects of harassments" by Attorney General Tom C. Clark.

His request was put before the grand jury by Assistant Attorney General Alex Campbell and United States Attorney George Morris Fay. In accordance with usual custom, the Government attorneys were not in the room when the jury voted.

The Government yesterday presented the testimony of two unidentified middle-aged women witnesses to the grand jury. One witness was believed to have been formerly associated with the New Jersey Congressman's office.

The Justice Department's case grows out of charges by Drew Pearson, newspaper columnist, that Thomas received "kickbacks" from employes of his office.

The statute involved is the "false statements" provision of the United States code. It makes it a Federal offense for anyone to make, or cause to be made, deliberately false statements to an agency of the Government. Several New Jersey lawyers petitioned the Justice Department to investigate the charge.

Members of the House file payroll information with the Clerk of the House and the disbursing officer, who in turn submit it to the General Accounting Office, a Government agency.

Soviet Uses 28th Veto To Block Berlin Plan; Neutrals to Try Again

Jessup Declares Responsibility for U. N. Failure Rests Solely on Russia

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP).—Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky tonight vetoed the plan submitted by the six "neutral" members of the United Nations Security Council for settling the Berlin dispute.

It was the Soviet Union's twenty-eighth veto and the second cast by Vishinsky personally. The vote was 9 to 2, with Russia and the Soviet Ukraine casting the lone negative votes.

Argentine Foreign Minister Juan Atilio Bramuglia, acting president of the Council, told newsmen: "I will keep on trying to get a peaceful settlement."

He spoke for the five other "neutrals" — China, Syria, Belgium, Canada and Colombia—as well as his own country.

Some Progress Seen

"I am sure," Bramuglia said, "neither of the parties wants to reach the worst now. And it is my duty to try to bring them to an agreement. Their differences have been very much ironed out so far and they may still be brought to a coincidence in viewpoints."

The discussion just before the vote disclosed that the major sticking point between Russia and the Western powers is: when will the Russian blockade on Berlin be lifted and when will the Russian mark be made the currency for all four sectors in Berlin?

Dr. Philip C. Jessup, United States delegate, told the Council that responsibility for stopping Council action rested solely upon the Soviet Union.

Immediately after the vote, Jessup went over to Bramuglia and congratulated him for his efforts to bring Russia and the Western powers together.

Efforts to Continue

"You know that this is not over yet," Jessup told Bramuglia. "You know that you will have to continue working for a solution."

As he left the jammed hall, Vishinsky said to a reporter:

"My position is perfectly clear. There is nothing to add to it."

The vetoed resolution proposed that Russia and the Western powers lift all restrictions on communications with Berlin as soon as the four governments had been notified that the resolution was adopted.

It also provided that at that same moment the military governors of the four powers in Berlin would begin negotiations aimed at making the Soviet currency the single money for all of Berlin. The currency arrangement would go into effect by November 20. The final provision called for a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers by November 30 for a discussion of the whole German problem.

West European Chiefs Meet To Discuss American Alliance

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP).—Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and the Benelux countries met today to discuss how their alliance could be linked in a military treaty relationship with the United States and Canada.

Authoritative American and British sources said this was expected to be the central theme of the three-day conference. The ministers were meeting for the third time as the consultative council of the five-nation Brussels Alliance.

A Washington dispatch said invitations to a conference to draft a military alliance between North America and Western Europe probably will go out soon after next week's presidential election.

[A Canadian government source in Ottawa said a seven-nation exchange of views at cabinet level will be the next stage in the progress toward a North Atlantic alliance.]

Official British sources said the ministers decided soon after today's meeting began that the sessions will be completely restricted. Each delegation's own official spokesman left the meeting at once. There will be no briefing sessions for newsmen but a joint communique will be issued when the talks end, the informants said.

Sources in touch with the proceedings said the secret agenda before the ministers is highlighted by these issues:

1. Development of the Brussels Union into a North Atlantic military pact with the United States and Canada.

2. Convocation, or indefinite deferment, of the Western European Assembly projected by France and Belgium.

3. Admitting new members into the Brussels Union.

4. Consideration of the report of the permanent military committee.

5. Economic, financial, social and cultural cooperation between the five countries.

6. Coordination of foreign policy.

Troops Seize Half of North France Mines

No Violence Reported As Government Forces Take Over Struck Pits

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP).—Thirty thousand heavily armed French troops and police occupied approximately half of the nation's key northern coal fields today and seized at least 12 struck mines.

No violence was reported as the government forces, including Moroccan infantry units, moved in before dawn. Pickets meekly surrendered the pits to troops backed up by armored cars and heavy machineguns.

Government officials used battle-like language to describe the operation, saying: "All objectives were reached without incident."

The government forces swept over about 280 square miles in the area near the Belgian border. The main seizures of struck mines took place at Valenciennes and Douai. About 15 arrests were made.

Quiet prevailed in the central and southern coal fields. The French mine strike has been in progress since October 4, costing the nation and through it the projects for European recovery an estimated three million tons of coal.

The Communists, who called the strike, showed no open signs of weakening. Communist Deputy Arthur Ramette told a miners' meeting at Denain, near Valenciennes, that if troops and police are kept in the coal fields the miners "will undertake a battle that will last as long as necessary" to drive them out.

Interior Minister Jules Moch, in a broadcast to miners, said the troops were being used "to prevent the destruction of hundreds of billions of francs of national wealth." The mines, he declared, are "endangered by the criminal decision (of Communist union leaders) to abandon safety devices."

Reports from Lille said dock workers at Calais and Boulogne decided not to unload any more coal from abroad. It is expected that imported coal now will be unloaded in Belgian ports and shipped to France by rail.

Revolt Rages In Paraguay's Capital City

Military Group Battles to Oust Gonzalez Regime

(From Press Dispatches)

A military revolt raged last night in Asuncion, capital of Paraguay.

The government radio said its forces were battling with an army group led by Col. Carlos Montanaro, who seeks to overthrow the regime of President Natalacio Gonzalez.

It was the second time in a year that the country has been plagued by revolution.

Communications Cut

There was no direct communication with Asuncion, and the situation there appeared to be confused. The government radio announced that Montanaro had surrendered, then said an hour later he had backed down on a promise to surrender and fighting continued.

The revolt started Sunday when a plane dropped several bombs on Asuncion. That apparently was the signal for Colonel Montanaro to lead cadets from the Paraguayan Military Academy in the revolution.

The radio admitted resistance continued in the academy building and would be difficult to mop up.

Reports received here said the cadets, joined by 200 sailors, had given battle to the police, who remained loyal to the government.

Some Rebels Quit

The latest report by the Asuncion radio said a pocket of rebel resistance had surrendered in the heart of the city, but other revolutionaries were fleeing to a village across the Parauguay River from the Argentine town of Puerto Pilcomayo.

The radio said President Gonzales had gone to the headquarters of a cavalry division at the nearby military establishment of Campo Grande. It added that government forces controlled the capital despite the President's departure.

The radio admitted that some members of Gonzalez's cabinet had joined the rebels. The broadcast said Mario Mallorquin, Minister of Economy, had been captured while leading a rebel attack.

The State Department declined comment on the reports, except to say that the U. S. Embassy in Asuncion had sent word that "no United States citizens have been reported injured.

Adds Perjury Accusation

Chambers Repeats Charges In Answering Suit by Hiss

Whittaker Chambers yesterday repeated his charge that Alger Hiss, former policy-making State Department official, was a secret Communist and added a new blast that Hiss had also been guilty of perjury.

The $30,000-a-year senior editor of Time magazine filed a formal answer in Federal Court in Baltimore to a $50,000 libel and slander suit which Hiss brought against him.

Chambers asked the court to dismiss the suit on the ground that his statement that Hiss had been a member of an "elite" group of Communists dedicated to influencing Government policy were true.

He charged further that Hiss had committed perjury when he denied any Communist affiliation in hearings before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Hiss at first denied knowing a man by the name of Whittaker Chambers but in later hearings finally acknowledged he had known Chambers, one time secret courier for the Communist underground, under another name and had loaned Chambers his apartment.

Hiss was a wartime official of the State Department and attended the Yalta Conference as one of President Roosevelt's advisers. He also was active in the Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco Conferences where the skeleton of the United Nations was formed.

He sued Chambers on the basis of the latter's statements to the House committee in August and more particularly on a network radio broadcast. Witnesses before congressional hearings are generally considered immune from suit over their testimony.

Mexico Gets U. S. Regrets on Influx Of Laborers

By The Associated Press

The United States has expressed "profound regret" to Mexico over the manner in which hundreds of Mexican farm laborers crossed the border this month near El Paso, Tex.

A note published last night by the State Department promised that all will be rounded up and repatriated. It said orders have been issued to prevent illegal entry of any others.

The action followed a form of protest filed last week by Mexico that large numbers of laborers were permitted to cross the border by American immigration officials in violation of an eight-month-old agreement between the two countries. This set up machinery to control the seasonal flow of workers employed on farms in Texas and elsewhere in the West.

John P. Boyd, deputy immigration commissioner, acknowledged that Mexicans had "swarmed" across the border illegally, but said Federal officials were unable to cope with the influx.

Author Edmund Wilson Claims He's Just a Typical American Bourgeois

The Puritan progenitors of Edmund Wilson must have turned over in their graves en masse two years ago when the pudgy literary pundit produced his "Memoirs of Hecate County."

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
EDMUND WILSON
and the fourth Mrs. Wilson, the former Elena Thornton

The volume is a collection of short stories and one of these, "The Princess With the Golden Hair," deals with the subject of sex in such a way as to be declared "obscene" and suppressed in the Empire State of New York. The United States Supreme Court yesterday upheld the ban by a split verdict.

Everybody knows—or at least, everybody believes—that the one tried and true formula for a best seller is a book dealing with one of the facets of sex in such a way as to be banned in Boston.

Edmund Wilson more than met these requirements, but his "Hecate County" never made more than 50,000 over-the-counter sales. Doubleday & Co., the publisher, withdrew the $2.50 volume from circulation after the lower courts had backed up the screams of horror raised by the Society for the Suppression of Vice.

Raid, bumptious, fiftyish "Bunny" Wilson has been married four times. His third spouse, Mary McCarthy, is like himself a literary critic and writer. Her book, "The Way it Was With Her," includes a character portrayel believed by some of the literary set to resemble Wilson. His "Hecate County" is similarly said to contain a character resembling his third wife.

Father of a daughter by his first wife and of a son by his third, Wilson married a fourth time in December '46, taking as his bride Elena Thorton of New York. They were married in Reno the day after each had divorced their respective mates. The wedding ceremony took place in the home of Wilson's attorney, who ordered the blinds drawn so no one could peek in, according to a news dispatch.

Edmund Wilson, in his own words, is a "typical specimen of the current American bourgoisie." He was born in Red Bank, N. J., and descended from a line of people who were comfortably well off and comfortably educated. His father was a lawyer and at one time State's Attorney General.

He went to Hill School at Pottstown, Pa., and then to Princeton, from which he was gradauted in 1916. At Princeton he met F. Scott Fitzgerald, the late novelist, with whom he became close friends and, after the first World War, a leader of the "lost generation" literary movement.

After service with the AEF, Wilson became for a couple of years managing editor of Vanity Fair, then in its brilliant heyday of Dorothy Parker, Robert Benchley, and William Rose Benet.

Over the years, Wilson achieved a reputation as an acute literary critic and as a lucid essayist. He contributed regularly to New Republic and later to the New Yorker, and published several works which added to his stature, among them "Axel's Castle" and "To the Finland Station." Many think he's the best book reviewer and critic in the country.

Wilson was for some years an ardent supporter of Soviet Russia, and in 1936 wrote "Travels in Two Democracies" to express his enthusiasm. Two years later, though, he became a bitter anti-Stalinist.

The court-criticized critic lives in a Cape Cod house at Wellfleet, Mass. Friends say "Bunny" is shy, absent-minded and stutters when he get angry.

Unlike other literary folks, Wilson hates detective stories. He ranks them as "a kind of vice . . . somewhere between crossword puzzles and smoking."

Hecate County Ban Upheld by High Court

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

By a split decision—and without comment—the Supreme Court yesterday upheld a New York ban of the book, "Memoirs of Hecate County," on grounds that it is obscene.

Contending the book by Edmund Wilson is a serious work of literature, not "pornography," its publishers, Doubleday and Co., Inc., had appealed New York decisions banning publication or sale of the volume.

Doubleday argued that suppression of the book was encroachment on the safeguard of freedom of the press and "a grave constitutional issue." Attorneys for New York State called it a question of simple obscenity—and nothing more.

The Supreme Court vote upholding New York was 4-4, with no disclosure as to which justices were on either side of the issue. A split decision automatically upholds a previous judgment. The court announced only: "The judgment (of the New York courts) is affirmed by an equally divided court. Mr. Justice Frankfurter took no part in the consideration or decision of the case."

No explanation was given of Justice Frankfurter's failure to participate in the case. Some years ago, however, he and Wilson were both contributing editors of the magazine, New Republic.

Doubleday & Co. was convicted under a New York statute which prohibits printing, selling, lending, giving away or having in possession "any obscene, lewd, lascivious, filthy, indecent or disgusting book. . . ."

The company was fined $1000 in the New York City Court of Special Sessions and admonished that any future publication or sale of the book would be punishable by a one-year prison term. The New York Court of Appeals upheld this decision.

In the words of its publishers, the book consists of six interrelated stories which attempt "to deride the immorality of the upper middle class in suburban New York between the two World Wars"

Principal target of the State was the book's major story, "The Princess With the Golden Hair." The publishers described this as "a story of sexuality and promiscuity, skillfully told . . ."

The story involves a middle-aged male character, an unseeing egotist; a beautiful, neurotic matron—Imogen, the princess—and Anna, a Brooklyn taxi-dancer. The egotist contracts veneral disease from Anna, among other adventures.

"The male protagonist is pictured as devoting almost all his time and thought to the sexual conquests of both women alternately," say the publishers, "But the point the story brings home to the readers is the futility of such a life . . ."

Frank S. Hogan, district attorney of New York City, noted in his brief, that "the author describes or suggests more than 15 assorted sex acts, three frustrated attempts, numerous sex anecdotes, filthy conversation and other obscenities."

Throughout the litigation over the book, the only written opinion was a dissent, from one of three trial judges, who held that "the writer of the story is evidently and honestly concerned with the complex influences of sex and of class-consciousness on man's relentless search for happiness."

Doubleday & Co. declared the book should not be treated as the product of a "fly-by-night anonymous publisher," and that "any definition of the word, 'obscene'" should not be "so broad as to catch up a bona fide work of literature."

The Supreme Court justices were supplied with copies of the book, and presumably read it before giving their opinion.

Launches Book Fair

POWWOW—Algonquin Indians Martha Tatum and Judith De Croes talk things over with Capt. John Smith (Martin Cross.) The youngsters took part in an Indian pageant, held at John Eaton School last night, to start off the annual Children's Book Fair of the Cleveland Park Community Library Committee

Indian Show Opens Child Book Fair

Once upon a time the Indians lived here, but that was many, many years ago—long before this was the District of Columbia.

Last night, for just an hour, 32 of them returned. At John Eaton School, 34th and Lowell sts. nw., they showed how they lived those many years ago.

They weren't real Indians, of course. They were a group of 10-year-olds (mostly) who put on an hour-long pageant titled "Indians of the District of Columbia" before more than 400 adults and children at the school. Thus did the Cleveland Park Mmorial Library committee's third annual Children's Book Fair get under way.

Series of Scenes

The pageant, written and produced by Miss Elizabeth Rounds, Millard Fillmore School teacher, consisted of a series of scenes depicting the life of the first District residents. It began like this:

The auditorium darkened, the music died away, and Miss Rounds nodded to a 10-year-old boy in Indian dress, standing alone in the center of the stage. "All right, Steven," she whispered.

Young Steven Dice, of 3600 Whitehaven pkwy. nw., began his narration—"About 300 years ago, white men led by Capt. John Smith landed. . . ."

Then Steven turned the stage over to Delores Bronson, 11, of 1426 35th st. nw., a young lady whose forebears were Pueblo Indians. Delores told the audience that "corn was the Indians' favorite food," and a minute later they saw a "Corn Dance," with several little Indians taking part. And so it went.

The 32 children, Miss Rounds confided, had made their Indian attire themselves, complete to the black tissue paper braids that looked like real hair to the audience. All were Fillmore School pupils.

N. Y. Drivers To Strike for Bus Fare Hike

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Drivers on seven bus lines, serving 3,500,000 persons daily, will strike at 9 a. m. tomorrow to back up a unique demand for an increase in bus fares.

Last-minute attempts by the city's labor department failed to persuade Michael Quill, head of the CIO Transport Workers, to call off a strike by 8500 members of the union on lines serving Manhattan, The Bronx, Queens and parts of Westchester County.

Radio Writers Say Strike Will Proceed

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Radio Writers Guild announced tonight that it would go ahead with a strike against some of the top radio programs, effective tomorrow, but revealed it would not picket the broadcasting studios at the request of the Federal Mediation Service.

The script writers for some 60 advertising agencies and independent producers will refuse to furnish material for the shows. The agencies have refused to sign a tentative contract with the guild now has with the four major networks.

Strike Cuts Chicago Bread Production

Chicago, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—A strike by 1500 bakers in 18 commercial bakeries cut Chicago bread and cake production by 75 per cent today.

After meeting with Mayor Martin Kennelly, the company officials raised their original raise offer 1-cent an hour. Orginally they offered 9 to 13 cents an hour raise for workers in different classifications. The new offer was 10 to 14 cents.

The union rejected the offer although they modified their first demand of 30 cents an hour by 12 per cent.

High Court Denies Reviews to Pickets

The Supreme Court yesterday refused to review mass picketing convictions of 35 strikers involved in the widespread Hollywood film studio strikes of 1946.

This action, in effect, upholds conviction of the strikers in the State courts, where they received sentences ranging from one year in jail to two years' probation, plus fines totaling $9650.

In briefs to the high court, attorneys for the AFL pickets convicted unsuccessfully held they had been denied free speech and assembly, and that their mass trial "tends to reestablish as a pattern for the resolution of industrial disputes the coercive methods which were prevalent in the years before 1932."

Upholding of the convictions is viewed with particular significance at this time because of the National Labor Relations Board decision on Monday setting out bans on picketing and holding international unions generally responsible for acts of their agents.

The 35 strikers, and 90 others, were charged with misdemeanors in violation of a restraining order which laid down picketing conditions at the studios of Columbia Pictures Corp., where a jurisdictional strike was in progress.

Issued October 9, 1946, the restraining order prohibited the blocking of any studio entrances, specified numbers of pickets allowed in given areas, and banned use of any "vile names" or cursing, swearing, shouting, yelling, etc., to "intimidate, threaten, molest or coerce" anyone attempting to enter the studio.

Referring to the above language in the order, attorneys for the various unions involved held that "this type of language includes in its ambit picketing is peaceful. . . ."

State attorneys denied this, adding that evidence shows:

"The demonstration out of which this case grew was never conceived or executed for the purpose of acquainting the public with the facts of a labor dispute.

"It was conceived and executed as a demonstration of the fact that, unless restrained by official action, the members of the dissatisfied union and their friends could, and would, by force, prevent all persons from entering the premises of Columbia Studios.

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to examine a South Carolina law barring life insurance companies from owning and operating undertaking businesses. The law, which the United States District Court there held unconstitutional, aims at burial insurance plans developed by undertakers.

In other actions, the high court:

Refused to review a protest by Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. that it is being ousted from the Detroit-Ann Arbor market by "erroneous" action of the Federal Power Commission.

Agreed to rule on what price should be paid for preferred stock in the liquidation of the Engineers Public Service Co., a New York holding company.

Refused a hearing to a group of St. Louis movie operators protesting an arbitration system set up by a United States District Court in 1940 to settle disputes over film showing times.

Refused to review a protest by Texas against a reorganization plan for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Co.

CIO to Fight NRLB Ruling

The CIO said yesterday it would launch a court fight against a ruling by the National Labor Relations Board that mass picketing, which blockades plant entrances, is illegal.

Through its general counsel, the CIO also said it would fight another board ruling holding that a union is responsible for the illegal actions of its agents, even if these actions have been forbidden by the union.

The decisions were announced Sunday, in a case involving the CIO Longshoremen's Union. CIO general counsel Arthur Goldberg said it is to be expected that the longshoremen will ask for a rehearing by the board. If they lose there, he said, the CIO will join in an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals and then to the Supreme Court if necessary.

The board acted under the Taft-Hartley law.

Goldberg said in a statement "this decision makes it clear that the Labor Board is determined to enforce this anti-labor law in as harsh a manner as possible. It should bring home to the American people the imperative need for its repeal."

The anti-picketing ruling, Goldberg said, "goes far beyond existing views as to the proper scope of union responsibility for conduct on the picket lines.

"Under this decision the Federal Government is made a police officer on every picket line of the Nation to regulate the number and conduct of pickets."

"This decision outlaws even peaceful picketing by terming it restraint."

He said it would "imperil the financial position of every labor organization."

Delaney Named AFL International Envoy

AFL President William Green yesterday named Philip Delaney of Washington, D. C., as the union's international representative. He succeeds the late Francis P. Fenton.

Delaney is a member of the International Molders and Foundry Workers' Union and since July 1 has been chief of liaison between the Economic Cooperation Administration here and ECA missions abroad.

Green also announced the appointment of Henry O'Reilly of Chicago as national director of organization. O'Reilly, a member of the Teamsters' Union, has been regional director of organization in the Chicago area.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Get Degree at Oxford

London, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will become the first American woman ever to receive an honorary civil law degree from Oxford University, it was announced today. The award will be made November 13.

Civilian Pinch Seen Bigger in New War

By James M. Minifie
(Third of a Series)

Every competent authority agrees that in the event of another war, civilians will feel the pinch much more than in World War II.

The pinch in World War II came chiefly in the lack of certain key items such as tin, manganese, chromite, bauxite, tungsten, rubber and vegetable oils.

To prevent similar stringencies in future conflict, by building up a limited stockpile of critical items, the Munitions Board has come up against very difficult problems. Their solution demands a national policy, formulated on the highest level and legislation to implement it. The old motto of "back to normalcy" under which the stockpiling act was written in 1946 is not adequate to the emergency.

Some Favor Rationing

Many believe that rationing of critical materials ought to begin now to permit the stockpile to be built up. All agree that it is perilously behind schedule.

The operations and studies of the munitions board have drawn attention to the enormous complexity of industrial life and of the interdependence of items in short supply.

For example, there is not much point in stockpiling bauxite, the ore from which aluminum is made, unless electric power is available to convert it. Power is tight all over the United States and critical in the Northwest region, precisely where the biggest expansion of aluminum production facilities is going on.

The board found that "this region will have serious power deficiencies throughout the period 1948-1951. If adverse hydro conditions preyail the deficiencies will increase each year, reaching about one million kw. in 1951."

From the viewpoint of defense it had been hoped that the great power development of the St. Lawrence deep waterway scheme would have been under way by this time, so that a cushion of electric energy could soon have been available, comparable to that provided by the Tennessee Valley Authority for the munitions production of World War II.

Mesabi Ores Limited

This development would also have provided a waterway for ocean-going vessels to bring new ore supplies to the inland iron and steel industry. For one of the factors which must be taken into account in the next decade is the approaching exhaustion of the great Mesabi iron range. On the basis of present consumption there are only about 15 years measured supply of high-grade ore in the Lake Superior region, and some of that is underground, hard to get at. The ironmasters are already considering the possibilities of developing the great Labrador deposits.

The iron-waterways-power complex is also linked with copper, which is in very short supply. If additional electric power were available, aluminum could be substituted for copper in a number of electrical uses. If steel were not in such short supply it, too, would be substituted for copper in great quantities under present conditions.

Petroleum products are bound to be in short supply in any future crisis. Everyone who has studied the question insists that use of gasoline and kerosene would have to be much more seriously restricted than they were during World War II.

Petroleum Demand Increasing

This arises basically from the fact that the United States has now turned from a net exporter to a net importer of petroleum products. Demand is getting further ahead of exploration. This again can be linked to a certain extent with the steel shortage. C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, recently charged that the steel industry was denying to the petroleum industry steel that was being put to "frivolous" uses.

As in the case of copper and manganese, the question on which high policy must be crystallized is whether available steel production should be applied to creating greater production in the United States or to building up greater production abroad.

Briefly the issue is this. Every hole drilled in the Middle East so far has produced oil. In the United States four dry holes are drilled for every one that produces.

The oil resources of the Middle East are monumental. Experts say that although development there is only beginning, the recoverable oil reserves already proved are larger than the proved reserves of the entire Western Hemisphere. But between oil in the ground and gasoline in the consumer's tank there must be an enormous tonnage of drill-pipe, casing, tanks, pipelines, refineries and ships.

Synthetic Oils One Answer

The question arises: Would not allocation of the limited steel supplies to the Middle East oil fields, instead of domestic fields, increase still further the United States' dependance on foreign supplies?

One answer to the problem of domestic production of petroleum products lies in synthetic oils.

There is for all practical purposes an unlimited supply in the United States of oil shale and coal from which petroleum can be produced. Both shale and coal reduction processes are in the pilot plant stage. They are more expensive than natural production. Even easier is the refining of petroleum products from natural gas.

These three resources would assure the United States supply in an emergency. But the time to develop these potentialities is unquestionably now, and not when the emergency is upon us. Once developed they can be held in reserve on a maintenance basis. It would then be immaterial if more reliance were put in normal times on cheaper foreign oil production.

National Rifle Association Meeting Opens

Push-button warfare will not eliminate or reduce the importance of the infantryman, Lieut. Gen. Jacob S. Devers, chief of the Army's field forces, said yesterday.

General Devers spoke at the opening session of the National Rifle Association's first annual convention in the Shoreham Hotel. More than 1000 members, delegates and firearms enthusiasts from all sections of the country are expected to assemble for the four-day meeting, the first convention in the association's 77-year history.

Any future conflict, Devers said, will place just as heavy demands and dependence on the individual soldier and his personal weapons as has every war in history. He urged a modernized and increased training program in the use of small arms, declaring: "A man who is an expert with the rifle can quickly become expert with the machine gun or tank cannon."

Association progress reports were given by Dr. E. O. Swanson, president; Frank T. Parsons, jr., convention chairman, and C. B. Lister, executive director. Lister said membership in the association had grown from 3000 in 1923 to more than 400,000 in 1948. He said plans are being considered to build one of the largest small arms ranges in the country.

Featured at the convention is an exhibit of the latest techniques and equipment in the small arms fild sponsored jointly by the Army, Navy and commercial gun manufacturers. On display are custom-built rifles, shotguns, pistols and telescopic sights, all in various stages of manufacture.

Spectators are allowed to operate a bombsight and inspect cutaways of rockets and rocket projectiles. An antique exhibit ranges from a 7-foot rifle to a lethal French pistol an inch and a half long.

In conjunction with the convention the 1948 rifle and pistol championship matches are being held at the Marine Corps range at Quantico, Va. Winners at the three-day shoot will be determined Wednesday and awards will be made at a dinner at the Shoreham that night.

Pike Warns Against Curbs On Atom Study

Sumner Pike, vice chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, advised yesterday against restricting the spread of atomic knowledge today, lest "little Hitlers" attempt to seize power.

Pike told a group of educational leaders that wide dissemination of knowledge about atomic energy is essential.

He said the people need to understand not only the applications of atomic energy, but enough about the whole subject to make up their minds as to whether they want Government or industry control, civil or military administration.

"This is the jittery, sometimes apathetic, mostly tense period that little Hitlers—the men on horseback—like to seize upon," Pike said.

"Don't let any powerful person make you believe he alone is capable of being entrusted with knowledge and control."

Loyal Koreans Seen Retaking City of Yosu

Seoul, Korea (Tuesday), Oct. 26 (AP).—South Korean army headquarters today reported fighting on the outskirts of Yosu during the night and said there was a good chance loyal troops had regained the port city where the army rebellion began six days ago.

Even before this report reached Seoul, headquarters had announced the insurrection had been reduced "to the stage of mopping up separated bands of insurgents in the affected area" in southwest Korea.

The Korean navy reported capture of two rebel craft in Yosu harbor.

Premier Lee Bum Suk, who also is Defense Minister, said he would tour the affected area about 150 to 185 miles southwest of Seoul, starting today. Lee has attributed the uprising to Communists, with connivance of extreme rightists.

Martial Law Proclaimed in Peloponnesus

Athens, Oct. 25 (AP).—King Paul I signed today a decree imposing martial law inthe Peloponnesos, where guerilla activity has been increasing.

Military control of the southernmost Greek area has been urged by Parliament members from the Peloponnesos as a more effective means of fighting Communist-led rebels.

Sabotage and attacks on villages have increased, and there have been reports that Markos Vafiades, Communist leader, may attempt to send members of his rebel government to that sector.

The Greek army estimates there are 2500 organized guerillas and 1000 more underground agents in the territory. Guerillas have been forcibly recruiting there.

Premier Themistokles Sophoulis and United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady conferred today on the military situation.

China Said To Be Quitting All Manchuria

Nanking, China, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—President Chiang Kai-shek's battered northeastern troops were reported abandoning all Manchuria today in line with American suggestions that the government consolidate its positions south of the Great Wall in China proper.

Informed sources said a general evacuation was planned through the Liaoning Peninsula port of Yingkow, captured yesterday by the Nationalists.

The first of between 200,000 and 300,000 government troops, mostly American-trained and equipped divisions, already have left the Mukden area by rail for the 97-mile trip to Yingkow, informants said.

China Reds Reported Abandoning Paotow

Peiping, Oct. 25 (AP).—Progovernment Chinese dispatches reported tonight the Communists had abandoned Paotow only two days after seizing it, and government troops were ready to march back in.

Paotow is the terminus of the Paiping-Suiyuan railway, 615 miles northwest of Peiping, and is an important Inner Mongolian trade center.

The Communists took it Saturday after a Nationalist withdrawal.

(Only a few hours earlier the Communist radio still was reporting on conquest of Paotow. It boasted that the railroad throughout Suiyuan Province was now in Red hands except for the isolated capital, Kweisui.)

New Canada Premier Seen Within Month

Ottawa, Oct. 25 (AP).—Canada may have a new Prime Minister within a month.

Mid-November, it appeared today, would see ailing William Lyon MacKenzie King turn over his office to Louis St. Laurent, the Liberal Party's new leader.

From London, where MacKenzie King was up again after a bout of illness, it was reported he would resign a week or two after his return to Ottawa, November 5 or 6.

Lone Negro Student Complains Of 'Humiliation' at Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Oct. 25 (AP).—G. W. McLaurin said today he was under "strain and humiliating conditions" in his segregated classwork at the University of Oklahoma.

McLaurin, first Negro ever to enroll at the university in Norman, is seeking a Federal court order to end his segregated status.

He testified briefly concerning classroom, library and dining facilities which were imposed when he enrolled October 13. He is a student in the graduate school and is working for a doctorate in education.

He has been seated in an anteroom adjoining the regular classroom. The school has furnished him a separate place in the library and he eats at a separate table in the Woodrow Wilson dining hall.

"It is necessary to look at the professor and blackboard from a greater angle than the other students," McLaurin said of his anteroom.

"It puts me under a strain and humiliating conditions, and handicaps my work. I cannot concentrate as I should.

"I feel there is something irregular in that I can't sit with other students."

McLaurin testified that his desk in the university library is on the flood above the librarian's desk and he must walk downstairs to check out books. He is required to return to his desk, which he described as "behind the stacks," to study, while white students have the freedom of the building, he said.

Gossett Doubts That All DPs Can Meet Entry Requirement

By The Associated Press

Representative Gossett (D., Tex.) said yesterday he doubts that enough "qualified" individuals can be found at displaced persons camps in Europe to fill the 205,000 quota authorized for admission to the United States.

Just returned from a tour of Europe and an inspection of some of the largest DP camps, the Texan added in an interview:

"I have no doubt, however, but that the full number specified in the law will be admitted. I simply mean that there is a doubt in my mind that 205,000 of these people can meet the entry requirements as I interpret them."

Under the law, displaced persons entering this country are supposed to be sponsored by American citizens who give assurance that the newly admitted aliens will be able to provide for themselves and not become a burden on society.

Names of DP's Published

[The Displaced Persons Commission last night published the names of the first 813 DP's now enroute to New York from Bremerhaven, Germany. Their ship, the Army transport General Black, is expected to dock Saturday or Sunday.

[Among the sponsors were the Tolstoy Foundation of Valley Cottage, N. Y., which was involved in the United States-Soviet dispute over the runaway Russian school teacher, Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina. The foundation is named on the list frequently as sponsor for refugees of Polish and Russian nationality. Secretary Kenneth C. Royall is listed as sponsor for Mrs. Renate Toming, 35, a widow from Estonia whose occupation was given as "nurse."

[Included in the group are 63 orphans assigned to the United States Commission for the Care of European Children.

[The first shipload includes 491 Roman and Greek Catholics, 161 Jews, 75 Russian and Greek Orthodox Church members and 8 Protestants. The religious preference of 18 was not stated. By nationality, the Poles are the more numerous. There were 388 Poles and 168 Lithuanians. Eighty-three were listed as "stateless."—Editor's note.]

"Grab Opportunity"

A vigorous foe of the legislation and of all other measures to relax immigration laws, Representative Gossett said he is now convinced more than ever that he exercised sound judgment in the position he has been taking.

"Many of the people in these camps candidly admitted to us that they remain there because life is easier than if they returned to their homes," he continued.

"This legislation simply enables countless numbers of these individuals to get into the United States and they are happy to grab the opportunity."

Gossett returned during the weekend with four other Congressmen from a month's tour of the European continent. With him were Representatives Wilson, Burleson and Teague of Texas and Battle of Alabama, all Democrats.

Wilson had a good word for the occupants of one large DP camp they visited.

"These people were largely from Estonia, Latvia and parts of Russia," Wilson said. "They were fine looking people and I think would be a credit to this country."

N. J. Waitress Admits Killing Police Captain

Newark, N. J., Oct. 25 (AP).—The murder trial of Mrs. Ann Powers, 39-year-old waitress, came to an abrupt end today when the defendant entered a surprise guilty plea to manslaughter in the killing of Police Capt. Thomas J. Rowe.

Rowe was shot on May 21, allegedly after an evening of heavy drinking on which he told Mrs. Powers he was breaking off their affair.

Reds Withdraw From Berlin Voting

Berlin GIs Minimize Red Friction

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, Oct. 25 (NYHT).—The Communists, it was disclosed today, have succeeded in sabotaging the main purpose of the December municipal elections here—to permit a test of Berlin opinion on communism. The Communists, who have already come out against holding elections in the Soviet parts of the city, now say they will refuse even to put up candidates in the west sector balloting.

The December election thus will dissolve in great part into a contest among the three non-Communist parties rather than a contest between totalitarian methods and democracy.

Western observers believe the Communist refusal to put up candidates is one of the shrewdest tactical moves of the year.

It not only prevents the population from rendering a clear verdict against Communist candidates—a verdict that had been expected to be overwhelming—but it also provides the potential situation for setting the three democratic parties to quarreling among themselves. Already the Liberal Democrats, Christian Democrats and Social Democrats are concentrating their campaign fire on each other. With the Communists out of the race this tendency may increase.

In view of the Communist stand, the extent of the feeling against Soviet-sponsored methods in Berlin can only be told by the size of the total vote, and the Communists can always claim that the verdict was not a fair one since they did not put up any candidates.

The excuse given by the Communists for not participating in the elections is the charge of "undemocratic circumstances" in the western sectors.

Circleville, Ohio, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Three American GIs just back from Germany agreed today that "there is no friction between American and Russian soldiers" in Germany.

Any differences are "purely political and in higher levels," the trio said.

The three, back on a special recruiting program, are T/Sergt. Julien Johnson, Danville, Va.; T/Sergt. Silas Singleton, Lynchburg, Va., and S/Sergt. Wade Lehr, York, Pa.

Much of the war scare, Johnson said, is the fault of news correspondents overplaying isolated violations of restrictions.

"Russian and American soldiers cross the line every day," said Johnson. "But the newspapers play up the arrests. It is our orders to arrest the Russian soldier who crosses our line the same as it is in the Russian zone when one of our men steps across the boundary."

Soviet Vetoes Berlin Plan

negotiate on the currency issue until the blockade is lifted; Russia refused to raise the restrictions until the currency agreement actually is in effect.

There was no immediate indication what the next move would be. An authoritative British source said the Big Three Western foreign ministers had arranged a meeting for 9:30 a. m. Tuesday to decide future steps.

This source said U. S. Secretary of State George C. Marshall, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman would meet at the French foreign ministry.

Today's Council meeting was delayed more than two and one-half hours while Bramuglia consulted the Western powers on a formula which he believed might be acceptable to Russia. The Western powers, however, turned the new proposal down.

Vishinsky did not keep the delegates in doubt for long when the council finally got under way. Raising his voice, he told the Western delegates, "You are telling us" to take off the communications restrictions and "we will begin the talks."

Soviet Stand Outlined

"There is no time limit for the removal of the restrictions," he declared. "The talks will begin at the same time the restrictions are lifted and that is what you call simultaneity."

He said Russia could not accept the resolution because it was based on the removal of the restrictions first.

Jessup appeared completely prepared for the Soviet announcement of the impending veto. He read from a prepared statement, departing from it only to answer Vishinsky's final blast.

"In the judgment of the world," he said, "this was a just and reasonable solution, drafted by the representatives of six countries from all over the globe.

"If the Berlin question is not settled on the basis of this resolution, the responsibility for the failure will rest squarely and unavoidably on the Soviet Union."

He said Russia has shown clearly by its actions it is attempting by illegal and coercive means to achieve objectives it cannot achieve by legal means.

"I listened in vain for any suggestion that he (Vishinsky) was approaching it (the resolution) in a spirit of accommodation for a settlement," Jessup said.

"What does the Soviet want?" he asked.

"If the Soviet Union wants to drive us out of Berlin, that result they cannot get by maintaining a threat of force. The Soviet Union can get all it says it wants without maintaining the blockade. With the blockade it can get nothing it says it wants."

The veto did not wipe the Berlin case off the Security Council's calendar. It merely killed that one resolution.

Under the United Nations Charter, the issue cannot go before the Council, unless the Council specifically requests the Assembly to act.

While the Security Council wrestled with the Berlin issue, the United Nations saw these other developments:

1. In an arms subcommittee of the General Assembly's political committee, Britain dropped her demand that the United Nations condemn Russia for refusing to agree with a Western-led majority for control of armaments.

The subcommittee approved a Belgian proposal for a U. N. commission for conventional armaments to continue its study of arms regulation. The vote was 7 to 2 with Russia and Poland voting in the negative. The subgroup defeated Russia's proposal for a one-third cut in the armed forces of the five major powers. Again the vote was 7 to 2 with Russia and Poland voting for the proposal.

2. The political committee voted down Soviet efforts to seat Albanian and Bulgarian representatives as full observers with the right to participate in all phases of the Balkan discussion. They are not member of the United Nations.

Russian Troops to Quit Germany, Paper Says

Berlin, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Following the pattern set in Korea and Czechoslovakia, Russia will withdraw her occupation troops and set up an East Germany state shortly, the Berliner Montags Echo said today.

The British-licensed newspaper said "high Soviet officials" here had informed German Communists of Russia's plan to end her occupation rule.

Top officials of the German Communist Party now are discussing the Soviet proposal to substitute the familiar "peoples government" for the occupation administration, the newspaper, organ of the Liberal Democratic Party, said.

Simultaneous announcements on formation of the new state and withdrawal of Soviet trops will be made "shortly," the paper quoted Soviet officials.

Canada Coordinating Defenses With Other Western Powers

Toronto, Ontario, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Canada's defenses are being coordinated with those of the other Western powers so they will fit into a North Atlantic security pact, Defense Minister Brooke Claxton said tonight.

Claxton said the existence of an Atlantic security pact in 1935 would have prevented the Second World War.

As Western union becomes stronger, any chance that there might be of the Soviet Union winning an aggressive war will obviously become less," he said. "The existence of a North Atlantic security pact of mutual assistance, including the United States and Canada, would further reduce the chance of Soviet success."

"We are planning our defenses after consultation with others," he told a meeting of the United Nations Association of Canada, "so that what we do will fit into any subsequent plan that may be arrived at after Parliament has given its approval to Atlantic security."

"Make no mistake about it," he said. "If war comes, if the Soviet Union commits an act of aggression, it will be an act which will break our peace and ultimately threaten our security.

"The choice in war would be a simple one—Communist or Canada. Our people would never tolerate a position in which we were passive while our country was being being defended by others."

He said that even though the situation in Berlin might improve, there would be "other points" of tension and difficulty, and "we shall only have a stable peace when the Soviet government seeks the welfare of their people rather than the extension of their power."

Council Summoned On Egypt's Charges

Planes Sighted

Two Alerts Sounded in Jerusalem

Jerusalem, Oct. 25 (AP). — The Jewish section of Jerusalem underwent a 50-minute air raid alarm tonight as an unidentified plane was spotted over the city. No bombs were dropped.

It was the second air raid alarm of the day. The Jewish section was alerted for 15 minutes this afternoon when an unidentified plane was seen.

Jewish and Arab artillery duelled for 40 minutes tonight in the heaviest exchange of fire here in two weeks. The fire was particularly intense in the Musrara section northwest of the Arab-held Old City wall.

Israeli Positions Shelled by Iraqi

Tel Aviv, Oct. 25 (NYHT).—While the Israeli army showered encircled Egyptian forces with leaflets urging their surrender, Iraqi artillery kept the Palestine battlefront alive today by shelling Jewish positions at Mazar, northeast of the Arab triangle.

According to an Israeli bulletin, other Iraqi artillery went into action at Lajjun and Meggido, northwest of Jenin. The army said the shelling started in early morning and increased in severity during the afternoon. There also was small arms fire on the same settlements, the Jews added.

A government press officer announced the northeastern Galilee front was static again today except for occasional sniper fire on the main Jewish convoy route to Metullah.

An announcement from Beirut radio that Arabs had captured the Israeli border settlement of Manara was denied by the Jewish army. A spokesman said Arabs were still north and south of the village and had it surrounded. However, it is still in Jewish hands and able to defend itself, he asserted.

By John G. Rogers

Paris, Oct. 25 (NYHT). — The United Nations Security Council was summoned today to meet at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday on the complaint of Egypt that Israeli military forces are constantly and increasingly violating the Holy Land truce in a way that endangers Arab troops and tempts them to take counter-measures.

The provocations, Egypt charged by implication, may soon inflame more than one new Palestine front unless the Security Council "acts in proper time" to restrain the Israeli troops.

News of the weekend Truman and Dewey Palestine statements embarrassed the American delegation, and left many other delegates amused or bemused over whether these new words of two American presidential candidates could imply any shift in American Palestine policy.

After a careful reading, however, most observers agreed the remarks were ambiguous. One clarity was that both men were interested in Jewish votes at home.

Lebanese Prime Minister Riad El Solh said: "We don't take any notice of Truman's vote-mongering. Everybody knows that the Arabs will decide the fate of Palestine by themselves in Palestine itself."

Syrian Delegate Faris El Khoury said Mr. Truman should "realize Palestine is not his property." "He should offer Missouri to the Jews," he added.

The Jews want to keep the Negev and they want title to modern Jerusalem and also a corridor connecting Israel and Jerusalem. The Bernadotte report would assign the Negev to the Arabs and would put Jerusalem under international status.

The Israeli delegation interpreted the Dewey and more especially the Truman statement as showing that the American people oppose any diminution of Israeli territory without Israeli consent.

Panama Revolutionists Seized In Plot Against New Regime

Panama, Panama, Oct. 25 (AP).—Police said today they had uncovered a plot to overthrow the 25-day-old regime of President Domingo Diaz Arosemena, and had arrested ringleaders, including a former president, a former ambassador to Washington and a high police official.

The announcement by Raul Acevedo, chief of the secret police, came after a series of terrorist outbreaks last night. Two persons were wounded, one totally, and three police officers were abducted and held for several hours. Firemen also reported evidence of attempted arson in two places in the city.

Police received orders early today from Minister of Government Jose Daniel Crespo to shoot any persons attempting a repetition of the outbreaks. Crespo said the government is maintaining vigilance throughout the republic to preserve order. The capital city appeared quiet.

Acevedo said last night's violence, which included the bombing of the Liberal (government) Party headquarters, was part of the revolutionary plot. He also disclosed that police had confiscated arms intended for use in the revolt.

The plotters, Acevedo added, already had decided on a provisional junta to govern the country in case their movement succeeded.

Acevedo said Harmodio Arias, former president, former ambassador to Washington, J. J. Vallarino and Maj. Francisco Aued, deputy chief of police, are being held in connection with the plot. Aued has been removed from his police post. Didacio Silvera, former president of the national assembly, also was reported seized.

20 Rightist 'Plotters' Expelled by Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 25 (U.P.)—Twenty rightists, accused of plotting a revolution, were expelled from Bolivia today under the government's "state of siege" emergency powers.

The men were all members of the rightwing National Revolutionary Movement (MNR), named by President Enrique Hertzog as the organizer of the alleged plot. MNR Leader Mario Diez Medina was arrested today.

The national rail strike scheduled today was called off after Hertzog had denounced it as an attempt to use hunger to blackmail the Bolivian people. There were no reports of violence anywhere in the country today.

FTC Charges Price Fixing In Paper Trade

The Federal Trade Commission charged yesterday that scores of paper merchants in many sections of the country are engaged in a price-fixing conspiracy to eliminate competition.

The commission cited the National Paper Trade Association of the United States, Inc., 23 regional paper trade associations, 22 association officers and 96 individual distributors for alleged "collusive practices."

The FTC's complaint said the group is "so large and influential that they are able to substantially dominate and control the market" for fine paper and wrapping paper. Such practices, the FTC said, result in a "dangerous tendency to create monopoly."

The complaint describes "fine paper" as paper usually sold to printers, lithographers and stationers. Under "wrapping paper," it lists toilet tissue, paper board, gummed tape and drinking cups.

The National Paper Trade Association, in a statement, "emphatically" denied the charges. It quoted President Ralph G. Luff, Philadelphia, as saying the charges "will seem absolutely fantastic to the trade."

The commission also charged yesterday that 11 manufacturers and their trade association have engaged in unlawful combination to fix prices and eliminate competition in the sale of textile shuttles.

A shuttle is a device used in the weaving of cloth.

The commission complaint said the companies involved manufacture "a substantial and important part of all replacement shuttles produced in the United States."

West Europe Chiefs Meet

Washington on talks they have been conducting during the last few months with the United States State and Defense Departments, the informants said.

The talks were designed to establish the extent to which the two North American powers will back the military of the Brussels Union in case of war, it was said.

The reports, the informants said, recommended that each country should began drafting its version of a full-scale military treaty between the United States and Canada and Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

It is expected that British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin will advise caution in proceeding with the project to create a European political assembly out of which the French and Belgians hope a federation of European states will emerge.

Parliament to Open With Regal Pomp

London, Oct. 25 (AP).—King George VI and all his lords will don their finest robes tomorrow to open a session of Parliament which will consider the Labor government's plan to nationalize Britain's iron and steel industry.

That industry now operates as a private cartel. It is expected to be taken over under a law slightly more flexible than those used to bring coal, electricity, gas, aviation, communications and the Bank of England into public ownership.

King George may outline the steel plan in his address from the throne. The government's bill is expected to be introduced later in the week.

There wil be no political fireworks Tuesday, however. The day will be given over to a type of pageantry such as has not been seen in London since before the war.

The King, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth, will wear his crown of state for the first time in 10 years. All the lords and ladies in attendance will be garbed in their full robes. Members of the House of Commons will wear either military uniform or morning dress, if they possess those outfits.

Visiting royalty, commonwealth Prime Ministers and political delegates and representatives of the African colonies are expected to be among the spectators.

Warren Case Is Dismissed

The Government yesterday voluntarily dismissed a witness-intimidation charge against Philip Warren, 42, New York attorney.

Warren had been held for action of the grand jury, but in a rarely used tactic, Assistant United States Attorney Andrew Oehmann told Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court that the Government would not seek an indictment.

Oehmann said he did not feel that the evidence would sustain a conviction should there be an indictment and added that he could not vouch for the credibility of the prosecution witness.

Judge Keech then ordered the case dismissed.

The case arose this summer after Warren made several speeches in Franklin Park. He was also charged with two cases of disordrly conduct and two cases of soliciting alms for the Franklin Park Civic and Humane Society. These cases were all nolle prossed before trial.

GOP Works With Communists, Says Truman

faced his prepared speech with an appeal for election of a full Democratic ticket in Chicago. He was greeted by long and thunderous applause in the hall where he was nominated for Vice President in 1944.

In his Chicago speech, Mr. Truman pointed at his Republican opponent, Thomas E. Dewey of New York, as "front man" for the interests he said were seeking control; and he made these sinister comparisions:

"When a few men get control of the economy of a nation, they find a 'front man' to run the country for them. Before Hitler came to power, control over the German economy had passed into the hands of a small group of rich manufacturers, bankers and landowners.

"We also know that in Italy, in the 1920s, powerful Italian businessmen backed Mussolini, and that in the 1930s Japanese financiers helped Tojo's military clique take over Japan."

The Nation's welfare, the President said, was gravely threatened from three directions, two economic and one social. And he solemnly warned that the "men behind" those threats were now in control of the Republican Party.

These men, the President declared, were seeking to increase their own profits out of the pockets of the wage-earner, to gain economic control of the Nation, and to foster racial and religious hatred.

Mr. Truman then recalled his own and his party's "long, hard fight" against the elements and the interests he castigated.

"When I asked the Republican Eightieth Congress to pass laws to check inflation," he declared, "I was thinking not only of high prices, not only of our housewives and the daily budget.

"I was thinking also of the urgent need to prevent another boom and bust cycle that would surely endanger our democracy.

"When the Republican leaders of the Congress failed to act against inflation, they proved themselves blind to the lessons of history."

For the interests which he said sought to control the Nation's economy, Mr. Truman had these barbed shafts:

"Today in the United States there is a growing—and a dangerous—concentration of immense economic power in the hands of a few men . . . The lobbies which work for big business found that they could get what their bosses wanted from the Republican leaders of the Eightieth Congress.

"The record of the Eightieth Congress is a sad tale of the sell-out of the people's interest to put more and more power into the hands of fewer and fewer men. The Republican Congress, acting for big business, has already begun its attack to break the strength of the labor unions by voting the vicious Taft-Hartley law.

"I vetoed that bill and fought to prevent its passage with all my strength. The Taft-Hartley law is the opening gun in the Republican onslaught against the rights of the working men in this country."

The President wound up his indictment of the GOP, the Eightieth Congress and the interests which he said controlled both with this sentence:

"The actions of the Congress lead to one inescapable conclusion—Republican leaders stand ready to deliver to big business more and more control over the resources of this Nation and the rights of the American people."

Then Mr. Truman said the Democratic Party in 1933 "drove the money changers out of the temple" and ridiculed the thought that the "new life" infused in the Nation by his party would long endure under a Republican Administration.

"The Republican Party," he said, "is now making soap-bubble promises to behave better in the future. They are pretty, those promises but they will vanish at the first touch of reality.

"You cannot expect the Republican Party suddenly to turn and bite the hand that has been feeding it—the hand of big business."

As evidence of racial and religious prejudice which he said was apparent in Republican acts and which Adolf Hitler used for "stupefying the German people," Mr. Truman cited the Displaced Persons Act passed by the GOP controlled Eightieth Congress. That "shocking" legislation, he said, "cruelly discriminated against Catholics and Jews."

At industrial Gary, Ind., the President returned to the direct appeal to labor which featured his four speeches in Pennsylvania last Saturday. Speaking to 4500 men and women gathered in Memorial Auditorium under union auspices, he recalled the "dark years" of the depression and the gains for labor which followed election of Franklin D. Roosvelt in 1932 after the people "had all they could stand."

Now, he said, labor, farmers and business all were enjoying unprecedented prosperity. But the Republicans, he added, "say that it's time for a change."

"Don't be deceived, my friends," Mr. Truman warned. "They took you to the cleaners in 1929. They want to do it again.

"They love labor and the farmer in October, but it's different after election."

On his way to and from the auditorium the President passed through streets packed with vociferous citizens of steelmaking and highly unionized Gary. His appearance on the auditorium rostrum brought the solidly packed audience to its feet shrieking its approval. When he finished speaking, he introduced Mrs. Truman and their daughter as at Garrett.

From Chicago Mr. Truman goes tomorrow to Cleveland, Ohio, for an afternoon address, with five rear platform talks scheduled along the way in Ohio. Wednesday he makes a major address at Boston, Mass., with five short speeches in Massachusetts and Connecticut, and Thursday he has a major address in Madison Square Garden at New York City after making four speeches during the day in New England.

Murray Reproves Dewey on Issues

CIO President Philip Murray last night accused Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of scorning the voters by refusing to discuss the election issues.

In a prepared radio speech sponsored by the CIO Political Action Committee, he said the GOP presidential nominee has "told us that automobiles are run by gasoline," that he favors "streams filled with fish," and that "the future lies ahead of us."

He said Dewey had also "berated an honest workman as a 'lunatic who should be shot'." That was in reference to the New York Governor's ire at an engineer who backed his campaign train into a crowd.

But, said Murray, Dewey has "blatantly disregarded the record of the Eightieth Congress" and "by his refusal to discuss with us the great issues of present day concern, displayed his contempt and scorn for the plain people of America."

In contrast, the CIO head said, President Truman has carried his campaign to the country in "frank and open fashion . . . without trickery and deceit."

"President Truman has outlined a program that promises to be of benefit to all the people of the Nation," he said.

Green Says AFL Will Push a Labor Party

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 25 (U.P.)—William F. Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today the AFL "definitely will do something" about starting a third major political party during its national convention here November 15.

Green, in an interview with the Cincinnati Post, said a resolution for establishment of a national organized labor political structure will be submitted to convention delegates.

"That much is certain," he said. "Whether the AFL will assume the entire burden of launching the third party organization, or whether it will propose a combination of labor groups in the move still is to be determined."

Regardless of the final shape of the proposal, Green added, the AFL is going to stay in politics permanently in non-presidential election years as well as during national political campaigns.

"We are hopeful," he said, "that the bitter taste of the Taft-Hartley Act will be the means of unifying the divided house of labor into a powerful movement that can make its weight a decisive factor in national, State and local politics.

Alexandria Court To Hear Negro Suit On Schools Feb. 7

A suit charging that Negro students are denied educational facilities equal to whites under Arlington County's dual school system will come to trial February 7 in Alexandria District Court.

The date was set at a pretrial conference yesterday.

The suit was filed a year ago by Constance Carter, 16, of 3425 N. 22d st., Arlington, against the county school board and School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp. Miss Carter claimed she was denied admission to the county's white high school where she had applied for courses not offered in the Negro schools.

The suit asks that the county be ordered to maintain a school system for Negroes equal to that offered white students.

Thurmond Assails FEPC Proposals

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 25 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond charged tonight that an FEPC law "would be carried out by a national police force, already being trained "by President Truman.

"This means," he told Arkansas listeners, "you would be hounded by Federal police whom you never saw before and who neither know nor care what your problems are."

The South Carolina chief executive and States Rights Democrats' candidate for President, again assailed the President's civil rights proposals in an address prepared for radio delivery.

Declaring that Mr. Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry Wallace all indorse the FEPC proposal, the candidate said a vote for any one of the three "is a vote for . . . a piece of legislation which is the first plank in the Communist platform."

He also charged his three major opponents with "having dared to insult" the people of Arkansas "by proposing that you give up your right to handle your own affairs."

Insisting that he is a stanch advocate of the two-party system, Thurmond promised "we shall reclaim and rebuild the Democratic Party . . . we shall give the people of this Nation a two-party system that means something."

Radio Speech

Atom Bomb Ban Asked By Wallace

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace, in his major campaign speech on atomic energy, demanded today that the atom bomb be outlawed and the secrecy veiling peaceful atomic development be lifted.

The Progressive Party candidate for President, in a broadcast over NBC, urged that atomic energy be developed for peace because limiting atomic power to the atom bomb "is like limiting the use of electric power to the electric chair."

"We know this elemental energy can be the greatest blessing in the history of mankind, and we say that America, Russia and all other nations must renounce through . . . the United Nations the use of the atom bomb and all weapons of mass destruction," Wallace said.

Wallace urged that atomic energy be developed on a non-profit basis as a public trust and not be turned over to private business to "be exploited for corporation profits."

"We demand good faith in the public ownership of atomic energy for full development of its peacetime use," Wallace said. "We demand that the use of this new power for dangerous war provocation be stopped. We demand that secrecy in atomic development be abandoned, except in the technical know-how of making weapons, and that in the interests of a free people science be freed from military and big business control."

Wallace charged the men who run this country fear Russia because they fear peacetime competition with Russia will force them to give up their system of "monopoly enterprise and giant profits."

"They fear their swollen war profits will not continue, so they try to force a wartime economy on peacetime America," he said. "They fear the effect on their investments of atomic energy developed for peace, so they try to control it and divert it to military use."

Dewey Is Set For Last Tour

outlook. "I think he is confident," Menzies replied, then hastily added, "the President is confident, too; very confident."

"Very Impressed"

He said he liked Dewey "immensely—I was very impressed." Then diplomacy won again. He said he found both candidates "personally attractive."

From Cleveland, Dewey's special will streak east. Thursday he will make five speeches in Massachusetts, concluding with a major effort in Boston Thursday night. Following President Truman into New York City, he will wind up his campaign in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

En route to New York Friday afternoon, he will speak at New London, New Haven and Bridgeport, Conn.

Earlier the same day he will appear in North Attleboro, Mass., Speaker Joseph W. Martin's home town, and will make two talks in Rhode Island—at Providence and Westerly.

Capehart Sees GOP Keeping Senate Control

Indianapolis, Oct. 25 (AP).—Senator Homer E. Capehart, vice chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, said today the Republicans will keep control of the Senate after election day.

He made the statement after checking with committee representatives in various States. He forecast the election of Republican candidates for the Senate in Minnesota, West Virginia, Tennessee and New Mexico.

'Not Saboteurs'

Warren Hits Democrats' 'Ugly Words'

En Route With Governor Warren, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Gov. Earl Warren today pledged the Republican Party to development of the Western region and struck back at Democratic campaigners for calling his party "saboteurs of the West."

The GOP vice presidential candidate declared that the "Federal Government must help us do a lot of things here," and said "Tom Dewey has the same belief."

Saboteur, he said, "is an ugly word, a foreign word. It's designed to divide the country—it's a word that shouldn't be used. We can't develop the natural resources of this country and unite it by calling the other party 'saboteurs,' 'gluttons of greed,' and 'fakers.'"

Warren spoke at San Jose and Santa Cruz and had speeches scheduled at Watsonville and Salinas before flying to southern California late tonight.

He started his Westrn development theme by saying that the 11 Western States would be "an empire" in any other nation. He said they needed only development to expand their present population from 18 million to 50 million.

At Santa Cruz, Warren, speaking of his running mate, said Governor Dewey as district attorney of New York made a "record for efficiency and fearlessness that has not been equaled in the country." And as Governor, he said Dewey was "both humane and efficient."

Federal Court Upholds Georgia's Ballot Stand

Atlanta, Oct. 25 (AP).—A three-judge Federal court today upheld Georgia's refusal to place the Progressive Party on the ballot for State offices. Henry Wallace, the party's presidential candidate, is on the ballot.

The court held that the suit concerned a "purely political matter" and said the Progressives suffered no serious inconvenience because State law permitted write-in candidates.

"There is also impropriety in a Federal court compelling a high State officer by a mandatory injunction to do his official duty under State laws as the Federal court may think he should," the judges said.

Most Spending Reported In Ninth Va. District

Candidates in the Ninth Virginia Congressional District fight are spending the most campaign money, reports indicated yesterday.

T. Eugene Worrell, Bristol, Republican, listed $3886.65 in spending and contributions of $4500. His Democratic opponent, Tom B. Fugatt, Ewing, reported expenditures of $2042.15 and no contributions.

On the Senate side, Democratic Senator A. Willis Robertson reported campaign expenditures of $2375 and contributions of $1625.

Robert H. Woods, Pearisburg, Republican candidate for Senate, reported spending $8312.18 and receiving $2315 in contributions.

Democrat Campaign Is $10,755 in the Red

By The Associated Press

The Democratic National Committee filed a report with Congress showing it has gone $10,755 in the red while spending $1,503,709 in the party's drive to elect President Truman.

The Democrats started using red ink, although they have spent $202,661 less than the $1,706,370 expenditures reported by the Republican National Committee.

Democrats said their committee's bank balance—a week before election—is down to $8485. Also listed as assets are $95,000 in loans to State and local committees. But the total of $103,485 in assets is $10,755 less than the $114,240 listed as unpaid obligations.

The Republicans did not give their bank balance or say whether they are operating in the black or in the red.

The Democratic contributor list contained, among others, the names of severl Cabinet members and others prominent in the Roosevelt - Truman administrations. Among them were Cordell Hull, former Secretary of State, $100; Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and family, $8000; Francis Biddle, former Attorney General, $200; former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, $1000; Robert E. Hannegan, former Democratic national chairman, $3000; Marshall Field of Chicago, $2500 Mrs. Marshall Field, $2000; Attorney General Tom Clark, $500, and Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, $200.

A. F. Whitney of Cleveland, railroad union leader, who once declared he would work to defeat Mr. Truman, was listed as one of the largest personal contributors to the Democratic till, at $4000.

Republican contributors included many men and women prominent in business and industry. Some were listed as:

Other statements filed with Congress today included:

National Truman-Barkley Club—Contributions, $9078; expenditures, $19,122.

United Republican Finance Committee of Metropolitan New York—Receipts, $680,089; expenditures, $532,340.

Legal Test Possible

A legal test involving Alabama's rebellious Democratic presidential electors appeared yesterday to be in the making.

Gov. Jim Folsom and his legal advisers arrived in the Capital and started investigating the possibility of asking the Supreme Court for what he termed "relief."

He explained that the electors on the Democratic ticket in his State had pledged themselves to cast Alabama's electoral college votes for the States' Rights Democratic candidate, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

"I want my people to have a right to vote either for or against the President," said the Governor, who has come out for the reelection of Truman.

Kenneth J. Griffith and Joe Langdon, legal advisers to the Governor, conferred with Clifford Durr, Thurman Arnold and Paul Porter, Washington lawyers.

New Pump, driven by the engine, shoots out oil with increased force, because of special spiraled chambers
New Turbine, attached to drive shaft, transmits driving force to rear wheels
New Supercharging Assembly, not found in any other car, controls force and direction of oil between pump and turbine, builds up "torque" as required, so that no gears ever need to shift through the whole range of driving

Inside Story of DYNAFLOW DRIVE

THERE's one thing about Buick engineers. They go whole hog on any job they tackle.

So they figured that there was only one way to go at the idea of using oil for transmitting power — and that was to go the limit.

That meant making oil do all the work that shifting gears used to do — and do it better.

It meant giving you a pickup that's really a pickup, when you step on the gas.

It meant developing a smooth flow of power through every stage of driving, without lag or bobble.

It meant perfecting a unit that gives good braking on downgrades — and a car that stays put when you park.

How well they did their job is summed up in one fact:

As soon as motorwise newspapermen got their hands on a Dynaflow Drive,* they called it "the biggest advance since the self-starter."

You have a command of the car that's too wonderful for words.

You feel a "sweetness" about the whole ride that some folks think is even more thrilling than freedom from shifting.

You can start, stop, start again. You can cruise. You can sprint. You just feed gas and steer, through the whole gamut of driving experience—and never lift hand from wheel except for parking or backing.

Fact is, you don't know what's going on in the automotive world till you've sampled this Dynaflow Drive. Why not see us now? Or better yet, take the first step toward having one of your own. We'll be glad to book your order, with or without a car to trade.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

Thurmond Disowns Invitation to Hastie

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 25 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights presidential candidate, said today his invitation to Negro Governor William H. Hastie of the Virgin Islands to visit him here was "sent by mistake."

Thurmond, in a statement, said he had told his office to send a form letter to each Governor absent from the Governors' Conference in Salt Lake City, Utah, last year, and that Hastie's name was included.

He said the clerk in his office who sent the letter "did not know that Harry Truman, in his all-out bid for Negro votes, had gone so far as to take the unprecedented action of appointing a Negro Governor of the Virgin Islands.

"Governor Hastie knows that neither he nor any other Negro will ever be a guest at the Governor's House in Columbia as long as I am Governor or as long as the Democratic Party or South Carolina continues to elect the Governors of my State," Thurmond declared.

The letter "carried customary greetings which one Governor extends to another, and an invitation when in South Carolina to visit me at the Governor's House," he added.

Tennis 'Riot' Verdict Waits On Election

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The criminal court trial of 22 persons charged with conspiring to incite a riot at interracial tennis matches ended today—but Judge Herman Moser said he will withhold a verdict until after election day.

"The court has been impressed with the fact that apparently political implications have been brought into this case in that one of the political parties involved in the coming election apparently caught hold of this case prior to its inception," the judge said.

Harold Buchman, local attorney and director of the Maryland Progressive Party, is a defendant. The matches were sponsored by the Young Progressives of Maryland.

After final arguments were heard, Judge Moser commented:

"The court does not intend to be knowingly used by any political party, without mentioning the names of any, as a forum in a political campaign."

Police broke up the matches last July 11 as a crowd of about 300 persons watched. Some of the players sat or lay down on the courts and were carried to patrol wagons.

GOP Claims Hatch Act Violations

By The Associated Press

Republicans claimed yesterday to have detailed evidence of widespread illegal political activity by Federal employes in New Mexico, but Justice Department officials said they had no such reports.

Besides the hotly contested national race, there is a bitter senatorial contest in the State between Clinton P. Anderson, President Truman's former Secretary of Agriculture, and Republican Patrick J. Hurley.

Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., GOP national chairman, said in a statement that he has "chapter and verse evidence" from New Mexico counties on violations of the Hatch Act which limits political activity of civil service workers. He added:

"Without the payroll brigade from the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Labor there would be no New Deal campaign today throughout large areas of New Mexico."

The Justice Department said through its public information office that the Department said it had received only one Hatch Act complaint from New Mexico in the current campaign, and had referred that one to the Civil Service Commission. That was done, the department said, because the complaint charged "an administrative, not a criminal, violation of the act."

Hatch Not Running

It suggested that information about violations should go to the local United States attorney or to the departments.

The information office would give no names with the one complaint reported.

The Hatch Act is named for its author, Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), who did not run this year. It is his seat that Anderson and Hurley are seeking.

Scott's statement declared that "Federal employes traveling in Government-owned automobiles at Government expense form the backbone of the campaign" against Hurley.

The GOP chairman said a congressional subcommittee headed by Representative Harness (R., Ind.) has sent investigators to check on reports of such activity. He added that Harness has asked the General Accounting Office to stop payment of travel vouchers "for these New Mexico campaign tours."

Scott complained of "terrific expansion of the Federal civil rolls in a national campaign year" and said "mobilization" of Federal workers in New Mexico is part of a national effort by "the Truman wing of the Democratic Party."

The church has been holding a conference here for the last week. Wilson was president of its North American Division for the past two years.

Md. Problem Of Bi-Racial Schools Aired

Preservation of Maryland's biracial school system is one of the major problems confronting the State Legislature, Delegate Leroy Pumphrey told the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce last night.

Last year's Supreme Court ruling that States must provide equal school facilities for whites and Negroes, he said, means that Maryland faces "extremely heavy" expenditures if it is to retain the present system.

He said the State Legislative Council, of which he is a member is now studying the problem but has found no solution.

Pumphrey reported that he, as a member of the legislative council, has considered consolidating the four major Negro colleges in the State under a single organization, whereby they could be improved to offer a more coordinated program.

The speaker said the council is considering more than 100 proposals for submission to the General Assembly next year. Among them, he stated, are a number of suggested changes in election procedure designed to eliminate "corrupt" voting practices.

Up to now no major bill directly involving Prince Georges County has been studied, he said.

An explanation of several proposed amendments to the State constitution, on which Maryland will vote November 2, was presented by Perry Wilkinson, another member of the House of Delegates. Wilkinson said only "about one in 100" will know what the amendments propose, since they will appear on ballots designated by amendment numbers only.

Heavy Seas Pound LCI Carrying 63

A small naval vessel with 63 men aboard was in peril off Cape Henry late yesterday, pounded by heavy seas which also tore loose two Navy scows from a tug in Chesapeake Bay.

The naval vessel, an infantry landing craft, reported she was being pounded by 25-foot waves and that he position was 140 miles northeast of Cape Henry. Naval spokesmen said she was in no immediate danger.

One of four rescue ships boring through the rough water to the scene, reported last night it had reached the imperiled vessel, the Associated Press reported. This ship was reported to be the destroyer Forrest Royal, which will stand by the craft, Navy spokesmen said.

Md. U. Seeks $20.9 Million Building Fund

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The University of Maryland laid a revised building expansion program before the State Planning Commission today, a program which would cost $20,913,392.

Dr. Harry C. Byrd, university president, explained that it calls for $16,543,392 in State appropriations and $4,460,000 from other sources.

Last summer the university put a $19,716,000 program before the planning commission. The increase of $1,200,000 is accounted for by higher construction costs and additional facilities.

Dr. Byrd said the university has an immediate need of all of them. In the past 20 years, he said, enrollment has increased from 1287 to 10,719, and the faculty has expanded from 131 to 750. Yet some of the departments still are working with the same facilities they had in 1928.

The $4,460,000 worth of projects from other sources are virtually all "self-liquidating projects," Dr. Byrd explained. They are to be paid for by fees collected from the students principally.

He said he would suggest to the Legislature next year that it set up some kind of a State authority that could borrow money for such self-liquidating projects.

Ask the woman who owns one

By tradition, she's entitled to the last word. So Packard has built it for her!

She might not care whether what's under the bonnet is a "free-breathing" straight eight, or a turbo jet.

But when she praises delightful responsiveness, and the soothing smoothness of Packard power . . . we like it! (What man ever put so dainty a shoe against an accelerator pedal and got such results?)

She might not care whether Packard's superior roadability and handling ease are achieved by advanced engineering, or by happy little gremlins.

But when she tells us that her Packard has the restful riding ease of a limousine, and the finger-tip handling of a tiny tot's stroller . . . we beam!

And when it comes to styling, and tailoring, and convenience features, she's always been the No. 1 authority—and New York's Fashion Academy confirms her good judgment in preferring Packard.

Come in—learn all the reasons why the most enthusiastic "man who owns one" is often a woman!

Packard

"Fashion car of the year"

New York's exclusive Fashion Academy, widely known for its annual selections of America's best-dressed men and women, made a style study of all the new cars . . . then named Packard as the "Fashion Car of the Year."

Gone is the wind! Packard's automatic all-season ventilation system treats you to a silent change of air once every minute—even with windows closed and the car standing still!

Screen Group Told Of 'Visible' Music

Progress toward seeing as well as hearing music was unfolded here last night to motion picture engineers, in semiannual convention at Hotel Statler.

The art form, with its proponents hope to add visual appreciation to the hearing of good music, long has been experimental, and controversial. Most widely known attempt to create visible music came with Walt Disney's treatment in "Fantasia."

Although Disney's treatment of the art form "deserves credit," last night's speaker acknowledged it fails as the proper approach to "audiovisual unison" of sound and screen.

The speaker, Ralph K. Potter, Bell Telephone Laboratories scientist, suggested that the "starting point" for the new art might well be the sound spectograph.

Sound Spectograph

The sound spectograph visibly records sound's frequency in horizontal graphs and its intensity in vertical imagery.

Color blending, with oscillating horizontal and vertical lines, would be needed to complete the illusion of seeing what is being heard, he said.

The total effect, Potter explained, would be a screen display of "something like the action of flames," or "like light rippling on a surface." In any event, he added, it would be different from what he termed "Disney's dancing abstractions."

Potter suggested that the public could be accustomed to the new art form by first using "visible music" in the film preliminaries, in title shots and credit line backgrounds. Properly, and uniformly handled, he said, the technique could develop to a point where screen audiences could identify musical classics by sight alone.

Delegates Hear Johnston

Earlier yesterday, the delegates attending the sixty-fourth semiannual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, heard an address by Eric Johnston, movie "czar," on success of his recent mission to sell Hollywood films to theater operators in Russia.

Commenting on his tour behind the iron curtain, Johnston said he could envision no war "in the foreseeable future." Neither, he added, could he see peace, but "only a long, long period of turmoil and dissension."

At the opening of the convention, Westinghouse engineers unveiled a 10,000-watt lamp they said gives off light half as bright as sunlight. It emanates, they said, from an arc "the length of a salted peanut." The new lamp was designed for use in making motion pictures.

Sponable President

Earl I. Sponable, research director of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., has been named the new president of the society, taking office January 1, 1949, G. T. Lorance, secretary, disclosed.

Other officers elected: executive vice president, Peter Mole, Mole-Richardson Co.; editorial vice president, Clyde Keith, Western Electric Co.; convention vice president, William C. Kunzmann, National Carbon Co., and secretary(Robert M. Corbin, Eastman Kokak Co.

New members elected to the Board of Governors: West Coast—Norwood L. Simmons, Eastman Kodak Co.; K. F. Morgan, ERPI Division of Western Electric Co., and Sidney P. Solow, Consolidated Film Industries; East Coast—Herbert Barnett, General Precision Equipment Corp., and Frederick T. Bowditch, National Carbon Co.

Tuck Refuses
Phone Union Is Denied 2d Conference

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Governor Tuck today declined to recognize a "second conference" proposed under Virginia's Public Utility Labor Relations Act by Virginia Division 33, Communications Workers of America, to pursue its quest for wage increases with Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia.

The Governor's decision brought a prompt protest from the union. Alfred V. Atkinson, president of the Virginia division, said "the union is still insistent upon" holding a conference November 1.

The statement by Arthur L. Lambdin, vice president and general manager of the company, indicated the compayn would not agree to construe any future negotiations as a "second conference" but would regard such bargaining as the union's utilizing the second reopening provision of the present contract.

[Under the Virginia antistrike law, if a second conference is held and no agreement be reached, the Governor is required to offer arbitration.]

The Governor, in a letter to both company and union representatives who discussed the second conference issue with him at length earlier today, held in effect that it would not be proper for him to intervene at this stage because of terms of an existing contract between the company and the union.

Salvation Army Leader Urges Closer Ties With Churches

A closer relationship between the Salvation Army and Protestant denominations in Washington was urged yesterday by Lieut. Col. W. W. Bouterse, commander of the National Capital Division of the Salvation Army.

Colonel Bouterse spoke at the monthly meeting of the Washington Ministerial Union at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw.

He pointed out that the program of the Salvationists is based upon the "simple Gospel," testimony and social work, and is essentially an outgrowth of a revival movement.

Although the work of the Salvation Army receives Community Chest support, Colonel Bouterse declared the Army is not "just another social agency" and has never lost its evangelistic fervor.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches and former head of the public relations department of the World Council of Churches, also spoke.

Philippines Woman Aide Visiting Here

Mrs. Simplicia Magahum Offemaria, a member of the City Council of Iloilo, Philippine Republic's second largest city, is going home nine months' ahead of schedule.

Authorized last June to come to the United States to study American ideas on juvenile delinquency, traffic control, sanitation, housing projects and city beautification, Mrs. Offemaria frankly admitted yesterday that she is "homesick."

She misses "everybody" in the Philippines and she is going to go home in time for Christmas.

Mrs. Offemaria, who has consulted with District Commissioner John Russell Young, Public Welfare Director John W. Tramburg, and other local officials here, will stay until the end of the week. She will look in on the Navy Department, Children's Bureau, National Labor Relations Board and the Housing Expediter's office.

Her next stop will be New York, where she will stay until she starts the journey back to join her husband, an officer in the regular Philippine Army, and their 3-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Offemaria, 29, received the degree of bachelor of law from the Far Eastern University of Manila. During the Japanese occupation, she served as legal investigator for the guerillas. As a sideline she is now society editor for one of Iloilo's newspapers—"just for fun," she says.

Thurmond Disowns Invitation to Hastie

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 25 (AP).—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights presidential candidate, said today his invitation to Negro Governor William H. Hastie of the Virgin Islands to visit him here was "sent by mistake."

Thurmond, in a statement, said he had told his office to send a form letter to each Governor absent from the Governors' Conference in Salt Lake City, Utah, last year, and that Hastie's name was included.

He said the clerk in his office who sent the letter "did not know that Harry Truman, in his all-out bid for Negro votes, had gone so far as to take the unprecedented action of appointing a Negro Governor of the Virgin Islands.

"Governor Hastie knows that neither he nor any other Negro will ever be a guest at the Governor's House in Columbia as long as I am Governor or as long as the Democratic Party or South Carolina continues to elect the Governors of my State," Thurmond declared.

The letter "carried customary greetings which one Governor extends to another, and an invitation when in South Carolina to visit me at the Governor's House," he added.

Tennis 'Riot' Verdict Waits On Election

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The criminal court trial of 22 persons charged with conspiring to incite a riot at interracial tennis matches ended today—but Judge Herman Moser said he will withhold a verdict until after election day.

"The court has been impressed with the fact that apparently political implications have been brought into this case in that one of the political parties involved in the coming election apparently caught hold of this case prior to its inception," the judge said.

Harold Buchman, local attorney and director of the Maryland Progressive Party, is a defendant. The matches were sponsored by the Young Progressives of Maryland.

After final arguments were heard, Judge Moser commented:

"The court does not intend to be knowingly used by any political party, without mentioning the names of any, as a forum in a political campaign."

Police broke up the matches last July 11 as a crowd of about 300 persons watched. Some of the players sat or lay down on the courts and were carried to patrol wagons.

GOP Claims Hatch Act Violations

By The Associated Press

Republicans claimed yesterday to have detailed evidence of widespread illegal political activity by Federal employes in New Mexico, but Justice Department officials said they had no such reports.

Besides the hotly contested national race, there is a bitter senatorial contest in the State between Clinton P. Anderson, President Truman's former Secretary of Agriculture, and Republican Patrick J. Hurley.

Representative Hugh D. Scott, jr., GOP national chairman, said in a statement that he has "chapter and verse evidence" from New Mexico counties on violations of the Hatch Act which limits political activity of civil service workers. He added:

"Without the payroll brigade from the Department of Agriculture, the Department of the Interior and the Department of Labor there would be no New Deal campaign today throughout large areas of New Mexico."

The Justice Department said through its public information office that the Department said it had received only one Hatch Act complaint from New Mexico in the current campaign, and had referred that one to the Civil Service Commission. That was done, the department said, because the complaint charged "an administrative, not a criminal, violation of the act."

Hatch Not Running

It suggested that information about violations should go to the local United States attorney or to the departments.

The information office would give no names with the one complaint reported.

The Hatch Act is named for its author, Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.), who did not run this year. It is his seat that Anderson and Hurley are seeking.

Scott's statement declared that "Federal employes traveling in Government-owned automobiles at Government expense form the backbone of the campaign" against Hurley.

The GOP chairman said a congressional subcommittee headed by Representative Harness (R., Ind.) has sent investigators to check on reports of such activity. He added that Harness has asked the General Accounting Office to stop payment of travel vouchers "for these New Mexico campaign tours."

Scott complained of "terrific expansion of the Federal civil rolls in a national campaign year" and said "mobilization" of Federal workers in New Mexico is part of a national effort by "the Truman wing of the Democratic Party."

Denver, Oct. 25 (AP).—Election of N. C. Wilson of 911 East Ridge ave., Takoma Park, as president of the newly formed Australasian Inter-Union Conference of the Seventh Day Adventist Church was announced today.

The church has been holding a conference here for the last week. Wilson was president of its North American Division for the past two years.

Md. Problem Of Bi-Racial Schools Aired

Preservation of Maryland's biracial school system is one of the major problems confronting the State Legislature, Delegate Leroy Pumphrey told the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce last night.

Last year's Supreme Court ruling that States must provide equal school facilities for whites and Negroes, he said, means that Maryland faces "extremely heavy" expenditures if it is to retain the present system.

He said the State Legislative Council, of which he is a member is now studying the problem but has found no solution.

Pumphrey reported that he, as a member of the legislative council, has considered consolidating the four major Negro colleges in the State under a single organization, whereby they could be improved to offer a more coordinated program.

The speaker said the council is considering more than 100 proposals for submission to the General Assembly next year. Among them, he stated, are a number of suggested changes in election procedure designed to eliminate "corrupt" voting practices.

Up to now no major bill directly involving Prince Georges County has been studied, he said.

An explanation of several proposed amendments to the State constitution, on which Maryland will vote November 2, was presented by Perry Wilkinson, another member of the House of Delegates. Wilkinson said only "about one in 100" will know what the amendments propose, since they will appear on ballots designated by amendment numbers only.

Heavy Seas Pound LCI Carrying 63

A small naval vessel with 63 men aboard was in peril off Cape Henry late yesterday, pounded by heavy seas which also tore loose two Navy scows from a tug in Chesapeake Bay.

The naval vessel, an infantry landing craft, reported she was being pounded by 25-foot waves and that he position was 140 miles northeast of Cape Henry. Naval spokesmen said she was in no immediate danger.

One of four rescue ships boring through the rough water to the scene, reported last night it had reached the imperiled vessel, the Associated Press reported. This ship was reported to be the destroyer Forrest Royal, which will stand by the craft, Navy spokesmen said.

Md. U. Seeks $20.9 Million Building Fund

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP).—The University of Maryland laid a revised building expansion program before the State Planning Commission today, a program which would cost $20,913,392.

Dr. Harry C. Byrd, university president, explained that it calls for $16,543,392 in State appropriations and $4,460,000 from other sources.

Last summer the university put a $19,716,000 program before the planning commission. The increase of $1,200,000 is accounted for by higher construction costs and additional facilities.

Dr. Byrd said the university has an immediate need of all of them. In the past 20 years, he said, enrollment has increased from 1287 to 10,719, and the faculty has expanded from 131 to 750. Yet some of the departments still are working with the same facilities they had in 1928.

The $4,460,000 worth of projects from other sources are virtually all "self-liquidating projects," Dr. Byrd explained. They are to be paid for by fees collected from the students principally.

He said he would suggest to the Legislature next year that it set up some kind of a State authority that could borrow money for such self-liquidating projects.

Ask the woman who owns one

By tradition, she's entitled to the last word. So Packard has built it for her!

She might not care whether what's under the bonnet is a "free-breathing" straight eight, or a turbo jet.

But when she praises delightful responsiveness, and the soothing smoothness of Packard power . . . we like it! (What man ever put so dainty a shoe against an accelerator pedal and got such results?)

She might not care whether Packard's superior roadability and handling ease are achieved by advanced engineering, or by happy little gremlins.

But when she tells us that her Packard has the restful riding ease of a limousine, and the finger-tip handling of a tiny tot's stroller . . . we beam!

And when it comes to styling, and tailoring, and convenience features, she's always been the No. 1 authority—and New York's Fashion Academy confirms her good judgment in preferring Packard.

Come in—learn all the reasons why the most enthusiastic "man who owns one" is often a woman!

Packard

"Fashion car of the year"

New York's exclusive Fashion Academy, widely known for its annual selections of America's best-dressed men and women, made a style study of all the new cars . . . then named Packard as the "Fashion Car of the Year."

Gone is the wind! Packard's automatic all-season ventilation system treats you to a silent change of air once every minute—even with windows closed and the car standing still!

Screen Group Told Of 'Visible' Music

Progress toward seeing as well as hearing music was unfolded here last night to motion picture engineers, in semiannual convention at Hotel Statler.

The art form, with its proponents hope to add visual appreciation to the hearing of good music, long has been experimental, and controversial. Most widely known attempt to create visible music came with Walt Disney's treatment in "Fantasia."

Although Disney's treatment of the art form "deserves credit," last night's speaker acknowledged it fails as the proper approach to "audiovisual unison" of sound and screen.

The speaker, Ralph K. Potter, Bell Telephone Laboratories scientist, suggested that the "starting point" for the new art might well be the sound spectograph.

Sound Spectograph

The sound spectograph visibly records sound's frequency in horizontal graphs and its intensity in vertical imagery.

Color blending, with oscillating horizontal and vertical lines, would be needed to complete the illusion of seeing what is being heard, he said.

The total effect, Potter explained, would be a screen display of "something like the action of flames," or "like light rippling on a surface." In any event, he added, it would be different from what he termed "Disney's dancing abstractions."

Potter suggested that the public could be accustomed to the new art form by first using "visible music" in the film preliminaries, in title shots and credit line backgrounds. Properly, and uniformly handled, he said, the technique could develop to a point where screen audiences could identify musical classics by sight alone.

Delegates Hear Johnston

Earlier yesterday, the delegates attending the sixty-fourth semiannual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, heard an address by Eric Johnston, movie "ezar," on success of his recent mission to sell Hollywood films to theater operators in Russia.

Commenting on his tour behind the iron curtain, Johnston said he could envision no war "in the foreseeable future." Neither, he added, could he see peace, but "only a long, long period of turmoil and dissension."

At the opening of the convention, Westinghouse engineers unveiled a 10,000-watt lamp they said gives off light half as bright as sunlight. It emanates, they said, from an arc "the length of a salted peanut." The new lamp was designed for use in making motion pictures.

Sponable President

Earl I. Sponable, research director of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., has been named the new president of the society, taking office January 1, 1949, G. T. Lorance, secretary, disclosed.

Other officers elected: executive vice president, Peter Mole, Mole-Richardson Co.; editorial vice president, Clyde Keith, Western Electric Co.; convention vice president, William C. Kunzmann, National Carbon Co., and secretary(Robert M. Corbin, Eastman Kokak Co.

New members elected to the Board of Governors: West Coast—Norwood L. Simmons, Eastman Kodak Co.; K. F. Morgan, ERPI Division of Western Electric Co., and Sidney P. Solow, Consolidated Film Industries; East Coast—Herbert Barnett, General Precision Equipment Corp., and Frederick T. Bowditch, National Carbon Co.

Tuck Refuses

Phone Union Is Denied 2d Conference

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Governor Tuck today declined to recognize a "second conference" proposed under Virginia's Public Utility Labor Relations Act by Virginia Division 33, Communications Workers of America, to pursue its quest for wage increases with Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia.

The Governor's decision brought a prompt protest from the union. Alfred V. Atkinson, president of the Virginia division, said "the union is still insistent upon" holding a conference November 1.

The statement by Arthur L. Lambdin, vice president and general manager of the company, indicated the compayn would not agree to construe any future negotiations as a "second conference" but would regard such bargaining as the union's utilizing the second reopening provision of the present contract.

[Under the Virginia antistrike law, if a second conference is held and no agreement be reached, the Governor is required to offer arbitration.]

The Governor, in a letter to both company and union representatives who discussed the second conference issue with him at length earlier today, held in effect that it would not be proper for him to intervene at this stage because of terms of an existing contract between the company and the union.

Salvation Army Leader Urges Closer Ties With Churches

A closer relationship between the Salvation Army and Protestant denominations in Washington was urged yesterday by Lieut. Col. W. W. Bouterse, commander of the National Capital Division of the Salvation Army.

Colonel Bouterse spoke at the monthly meeting of the Washington Ministerial Union at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw.

He pointed out that the program of the Salvationists is based upon the "simple Gospel," testimony and social work, and is essentially an outgrowth of a revival movement.

Although the work of the Salvation Army receives Community Chest support, Colonel Bouterse declared the Army is not "just another social agency" and has never lost its evangelistic fervor.

Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches and former head of the public relations department of the World Council of Churches, also spoke.

Philippines Woman Aide Visiting Here

Mrs. Simplicia Magahum Offemaria, a member of the City Council of Iloilo, Philippine Republic's second largest city, is going home nine months' ahead of schedule.

Authorized last June to come to the United States to study American ideas on juvenile delinquency, traffic control, sanitation, housing projects and city beautification, Mrs. Offemaria frankly admitted yesterday that she is "homesick."

She misses "everybody" in the Philippines and she is going to go home in time for Christmas.

Mrs. Offemaria, who has consulted with District Commissioner John Russell Young, Public Welfare Director John W. Tramburg, and other local officials here, will stay until the end of the week. She will look in on the Navy Department, Children's Bureau, National Labor Relations Board and the Housing Expediter's office.

Her next stop will be New York, where she will stay until she starts the journey back to join her husband, an officer in the regular Philippine Army, and their 3-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Offemaria, 29, received the degree of bachelor of law from the Far Eastern University of Manila. During the Japanese occupation, she served as legal investigator for the guerillas. As a sideline she is now society editor for one of Iloilo's newspapers—"just for fun," she says.

Video Seen Hiring 1,000,000 by 1953

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP).—Five years from now, television will be giving employment to one million persons and will have injected eight billion dollars into America's economic bloodstream, R. C. Cosgrove, one of the industry's leaders, predicted today.

The executive vice president of the AVCO Manufacturing Corp., director of the Crosley Broadcasting Corp., told 800 business executive attending the twentieth annual Boston Conference on Distribution:

"In the past 12 months, television has grown faster than any other major industry ever to appear on the American horizon.

"By 1951, annual receiver production can be expected to reach 20 million units, and be going up.

"By 1953, the total sets in use may be more than 12 million, with some 50 million persons in television's day-to-day audience.

"By 1958, the number of sets can be at least 40 million, with the total regular audience at 100 million."

Cosgrove said television "will profoundly affect the economic habits of almost all the Nation's population above the subsistence level."

In five years also, the distributors were told, 400 television stations will be on the air in 140 cities.

Arno H. Johnson, marketing economist and vice president of J. Walter Thompson Co., told the conference the American population in 1949 will have the purchasing power to buy and consume 50 per cent more goods and services than in the last full year before we entered the war.

The real answer to inflation is production, he declared, and "is the key to maintaining and increasing the present levels of real earnings and real purchasing power."

Canadian Speaks

Canada's Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce advocated an increase of Canadian exports to the United States as a foundation for a healthier commerce between the two countries.

M. W. MacKenzie told the conference "you sell us twice as much as you buy from us" and there are no markets to settle an adverse merchandise balance that last year amounted to more than one billion dollars.

Court Says Boards Must Show Rates

The National Association of Real Estate Boards and the Washington Real Estate Boards were ordered yesterday to produce for Government inspection their rates, schedules, and customs.

The order was given in District Court by Judge Alexander Holtzoff who refused, however a request for inspection of the minutes and other records of the boards.

The Government in a civil suit charges that the defendant boards violated the Sherman Antitrust Act by fixing fees for sale and lease of real estate.

Judge Holtzoff indefinitely postponed pretrial proceedings in the suit, pending an appeal on a motion in connection with it. The boards were declared innocent in a trial for alleged criminal violations of antitrust laws.

Abortion Case Goes to Jury

ney's office entered a nolle prosse because, it was said, the complainant was reluctant to testify.

In the recent case, Miss LoFaro, a reddish-brunette, testified she was given $1071 for "expenses" and to "get out of town" so that the case against Dr. Brown might be continued indefinitely and ultimately dropped.

Miss LoFaro said some of the money was given to her by her attorney, Ellis Klein, acting as a go-between. Klein, when he took the stand, said the young woman had stayed with him and his wife at their Fleeton, Va., home for about six weeks, but he denied giving her any money.

Taken to Gallinger

Miss LoFaro testified she obtained an examination from Dr. Brown after she learned she was pregnant. She said he demanded $400 for an operation.

The operation she testified, was quick—"not more than 20 minutes." But in a few days complications set in, she said. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital and police were called.

She testified she was originally advised by Klein to ask the physician for $5000 to help "hush" up the case.

In final argument to the jury yesterday, Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford maintained the Government's case was based upon lies. He urged the jury to remain steadfast in their beliefs and not be swayed from their convictions. The defense offered no witnesses.

Prosecutor's Charge

The prosecutor, Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin, told the jury there was no reason not to believe Miss LoFaro and her corroborating witnesses.

McLaughlin claimed Dr. Brown's alleged act of giving Miss LoFaro money was "evidence of consciousness of guilt on his part" and also an indication of "contempt of the law."

Records show Dr. Brown was arraigned and pleaded not guilty to the abortion charge on November 21, 1947. The trial was originally set for January 7, 1948, then continued until January 22, then to January 29, then to February 24. The case was later reassigned and set for October 6, and finally continued until Wednesday.

During the continuances, a subpena, and later a contempt attachment, were issued for Miss LoFaro until she was finally located.

U. S. Rodeo Outfit Expelled by Swiss

Geneva, Oct. 25 (AP).—Forty cowboys and cowgirls of an American rodeo company were ordered expelled from Switzerland today after a fre-for-all fight last night at the Palais des Expositions.

The outbreak left a large number of Geneva policemen with bruised knuckles, tattered uniforms and slight headaches.

Larry Sunbrock of Winter Garden, Fla., whom the Swiss newspapers described as "chief of the tribe," still was in the police station explaining the fracas to the police, the American consul and his creditors.

He was ordered to pay 1000 francs (about $250) for torn uniforms, lost buttons and other police property damage.

The police made each member of the show sign a statement admitting that he had "gravely abused the hospitality granted him by our country by taking part in the riot."

The melee started at the end of last night's performance when a Swiss named Michaud accepted the show's challenge to ride a bronco named Income Tax for at least 10 seconds and win 1000 francs.

Michaud claimed he did it. The cowboys said he wasn't even riding Income Tax but had managed to hang onto a horse named Fifty for about 10 seconds.

There also was an argument over an automobile which Sunbrock engaged with a deposit of 1500 francs to be driven up a ramp by a daredevil and hurtled over a bus.

There was a minor scuffle at first, but it quickly grew into a free-for-all. At its peak it was reminiscent of a barroom set-to in a Western movie.

Dodson's Station Wins Prize for Cleanliness

Dodson's Esso Filling Station was judged the cleanest and neatest business establishment on Rockville Pike last night at the meeting of the Rockville Pike Business Association.

Dean Rathbun, chairman of the judging committee, presented a silver cup to John Dodson, owner of the filling station located at Rockville Pike and Nicholson ln. Runner-up was Jack Wisner's Hardware Store, near the Congressional Airport.

This was the second year the association has awarded the cup to businesses along Rockville Pike between Bethesda and Rockville. Establishments were judged during the summer months.

Cooperative Flat Purchase Goes to Court

Another apartment-cooperative sales plan reached litigation stage yesterday when Mrs. Bertie O'Neil, 232 1st st. se., asked Municipal Court to order the eviction of tenants of an apartment unit which she had bought at 1860 Clydesdale pl. nw.

Attorney Hyman J. Cohen, representing the tenants, asked a continuance of the case pending a motion for jury trial. This was granted by Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott to give Cohen time for further investigation.

According to the defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Katz, who occupy a one-room and kitchen apartment, they were asked to pay $5200 with $2000 down for the unit which they rent for $52.50 a month.

The Katzes assert they were given 10 days to make up their minds. When they failed to buy, the unit was sold to Mrs. O'Neil. Cohen argued that Mrs. O'Neil had bought the apartment for speculative rather than living purposes. Attorney Herman Miller represented the plaintiff.

The apartment building, housing 20 one- and two-room units, recently was sold to Clydesdale Place Cooperative for $119,000 by the owners, T. Fred Williams and Mary Louise Williams, it was said.

Real estate records show the building had been bought by the Williamses last year for $88,000. In 1946 the apartment was purchased by Jacob Heckman for $77,000.

Still pending in District Court is a suit brought by 33 tenants of the Broadmoor Apartment asking that they be permitted to keep their apartments without being obliged to join the cooperative.

The tenants assert that the cooperative plan involves an illegal rent increase and is against public policy.

Scientist Finds 100-Million-Year-Old Fish

Angling with pickaxe in the Black Hills of Wyoming, a Smithsonian scientist fished up salt water beauties of some 100 million years ago, it was reported here yesterday.

The "catch" of Dr. David H. Dunkle, palentologist, included the fossilized skull and lower jaw of a marine turtle who sported in the salt sea there when the Arctic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico were linked. The turtle, not unlike sea turtles of today, measured some 3 to 4 feet in length, he estimated.

Other fish skeletons unearthed and identified by Dr. Dunkle included species which may have been remotely related to the present-day tarpons of the Florida coast and the sawfish and swordfish of today. All, he said, lived during the Cretaceous period of world history.

The ocean fauna of that era, explained Dr. Dunkle, was similar to sea life of today, for, unlike mammals, fish have changed relatively little through the intervening eons.

Dr. Dunkle, still busy at sorting, classifying and reconstructing the skeletal remains, said his best fishing spot for the Cretaceous-period fossils was in eastern Wyoming on the southwest side of the Black Hills. In this sector, he said, the "geological pages of history lie like a book, one period page atop the other."

Earlier, from Green River shale formations in northeastern Utah, he obtained some 400 fossil specimens of fresh-water fish from the bed of a lake of a much later period—the early Eocene of about 50,000,000 years ago—he reported.

110 in Week Get Traffic Tags 'Fixed'

An out-of-town motorist, who parked in an alley near Uline's Arena, was one of 110 motorists for whom traffic tickets were "fixed" last week.

He was Elmer F. Corey of Baltimore, whose traffic ticket was changed to a warning. He explained that he thought the alley was being used as a temporary parking space and that he was unaware he had violated a traffic regulation, police said.

A ticket, received by Morris Cafritz, Washington real estate dealer with offices at 1404 K st. nw., for parking in a "no parking at anytime zone," was changed to a warning after he told police he had made an emergency stop.

Traffic tickets were adjusted for eight motorists because of diplomatic immunity. They were Paul F. Blanc of the Office of the French Financial Counselor, parking abreast; Willilam Goertz, of 1344 Connecticut ave. nw., parked in public space; Gaston Jaccard, Legation of Switzerland, parked on crosswalk; Walfgang Seutter, Austrian Legation, obstructing an alley; M. More Water For D. C.

For more than a decade talk has been heard in the District Building about the accumulation of funds for the inevitable expansion of the city's water system. Some surplus was accumulated, to be sure, during the war years, but postwar demands upon the water division have been so great that it has been virtually exhausted. Now the city faces the necessity of expanding its water facilities to a cost of 70 million dollars, and the funds are not at hand. Adoption of the program will therefore necessitate either a further increase in water rates or borrowing against future water revenue, which may also require higher rates.

A public utility of this sort ought to be self-sustaining. Indeed, with the present unbalanced status of the District's finances, it would be unthinkable to draw upon general tax funds to provide new water facilities. And since the program outlined by Superintendent Auld of the District Water Division will probably have to be undertaken in the near future, there seems to be little chance of financing it out of current water revenue without loading an unconscionable burden upon water consumers during the next few years. Borrowing may thus prove to be the only feasible alternative.

Washington is extremely fortunate, however, that the financing of new water facilities is its chief problem. No modern city can exist without an abundance of water. A recent survey indicates that Greater Washington can expand to a population of more than three million without encountering any shortage of water potentially available. But even the normal growth of the next few years will demand expansion of the city's facilities to collect, filter and distribute water. Mr. Auld has done well to outline a comprehensive program before an emergency is upon us.

Irish Secession

When Mr. Eamon De Valera was beaten in the Irish elections early this year and Mr. John Costello of the Fine Gael undertook to form a new government, there were many who thought it might presage a new epoch in Anglo-Irish reconciliation. The Fine Gael derives from the party of Collins, Griffith, O'Higgins, Mulcahy, Cosgrave and others, which accepted the treaty of 1921, and undertook to organize the Free State government only to find itself involved in a calamitous civil war. In 1932 it was ousted from power by Mr. De Valera's party, Fianna Fail. Mr. De Valera presently found himself strong enough to proclaim a new constitution establishing the State of Eire. Under the Free State the status of Ireland was that of a dominion of the British Commonwealth; under the new constitution its status was altogether ambiguous. Mr. De Valera frequently described it in the Dail as a "republic," but no such word appears in the constitution. Neither, however, is there any mention of the King of Great Britain. Nevertheless by a special act of the Dail, the British King was authorized to act for the government of Eire in external matters, to negotiate treaties for it and to accredit Irish diplomatic representatives abroad.

Hopes that the government of Mr. Costello might adopt a less intransigeant policy in Anglo-Irish relations than Mr. De Valera were promptly abandoned when it was announced that his Minister of Foreign Affairs was to be Maj. Sean MacBride, son of the famous Maude Gonne and leader of the Clann na Poblachta, representing a much more extreme form of nationalism than Fianna Fail. Major MacBride's party is supported by the sympathizers of the Irish Republicans which conducted an underground war of terrorism against the De Valera government in Eire and against the Unionist government in northern Ireland.

Prime Minister Costello announced recently that he will ask the Dail to repeal the External Relations Act, thereby making complete the divorce of Eire from the British Empire. This announcement seems to have caused some agitation among dominion Prime Ministers now meeting in London, for they issued a warning that by taking such action Ireland would forfeit the economic advantages she has derived under the preferential trade agreements. The Costello government, however, appears to consider that the Irish and English markets are so interdependent that a reciprocal trade agreement will be necessary in any case.

If the separation is completed it will automatically create a troublesome external problem for the Irish government and a curious domestic problem for the British. Several hundred thousand Irish now resident in England and Scotland will suddenly acquire the status of aliens and each of them will have to face a difficult choice concerning future allegiance. The problem of the Catholic and Nationalist minority in Ulster will become acute. Since most of them are bitterly opposed to the partition, they will be put in the position of sympathizers with a foreign government.

Thus after the secession, the Ulster question will remain an open sore in Anglo-Irish relations. There is very little that an independent government of Eire could do toward ending it. But neither is there anything that Britain and its dominions can do to prevent the withdrawal of Eire from the Empire. As for Americans, most of them are unable to see why a step from which neither Ireland nor England can derive any apparent benefit needs be taken at this time.

Vishinsky's Veto

Soviet Russia's veto of the compromise plan to end the Berlin blockade is in keeping with that government's conduct ever since the dispute over Berlin began. Russia has stalled, offered excuses and devious schemes and, when finally forced to a showdown, has blocked all action designed to get the controversy settled. Mr. Vishinsky's latest diversionary maneuver was merely a follow-up to the run-around that the Western powers were given in Moscow and then Berlin. He proposed that the blockade be lifted in progressive steps while negotiations were going forward on the adoption of Russian currency for all Berlin. The effect would have been to give the Soviet Union a club to use on the Western powers at every point in the negotiations. Obviously they would have had to bow before Moscow's demands or see the restored trickle of traffic to Berlin choked off again.

The small nations' representatives on the Security Council recognized the disingenuousness of the Moscow proposal as readily as did the Big Three. They had proposed a fair and reasonable compromise based on immediate lifting of the blockade, negotiations on the currency question to be completed by November 20, and a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers to seek a settlement of the larger problems concerning the future of Germany. Faithful to the obligations of the Security Council under the United Nations Charter, they pushed their fair and courageous proposal to a vote, with only Russia and its Charlie McCarthy, the Ukraine, taking the negative side.

We think the Security Council has met its test very creditably. It might have stalled, fumbled and done nothing. Instead, it recognized the Berlin situation as the threat to the peace that it is and took every reasonable step within its power to eliminate that threat. Under the able leadership of Dr. Bramuglia of Argentina, the Council demonstrated both imagination and resiliency in dealing with the big powers and in working out its compromise within the spirit of the Charter. While its efforts have been blocked by the Russian veto, the effect is to throw the full weight of the Security Council against the blockade in the contest for world opinion. Until now Moscow's conduct had been condemned only by other parties to the Berlin dispute. Today it stands condemned by 9 of the 11 members of the chief peace agency of the United Nations, and we suspect this is going to hurt Moscow's cause more in the end than that cause will be helped by the continued attempt to starve Berliners in the American and British sectors of the city.

Now the dispute will go to the General Assembly. There again it will be aired for the information of the whole world. There, as in the Security Council, the small powers will strive mightily to bring about a settlement for the sake of avoiding war. But there will be no illusion as to the game the Russians are playing. And if Moscow still refuses to budge, the effect will be to drive the democratic world into closer cooperation than it has ever experienced before. Moscow itself is tightening the noose that strangles the last remaining hopes for any genuine understanding between the East and the West.

Cranberry Sedition

We dislike to be alarmists in these jittery times, but we feel it our duty to warn that another sinister threat to the established order is developing. It is an organized attempt to regiment the free citizens of this Republic into eating cranberries with chicken. This, if successful, would undermine one of our most time honored and cherished institutions—that of eating cranberries only with turkey. Yet so zealous have become these radicals, who call themselves the Federation of Cranberry and Chicken Fanciers, that they are flooding the country with propaganda, and are no doubt this moment boring from within in high Government places. They have even injected their issue into the election campaign and are embarrassing candidates for the Presidency and for Congress by demanding that these office seekers make public their stands on the chicken and cranberry issue.

The exponents of this subversive proposal insist, like all revolutionaries, that they are actuated only by a humanitarian motive, that of bringing more variety to the American table. The high cost of meat, they say, is causing people to eat more chicken. Therefore, to keep the chicken diet from becoming monotonous, cranberries should be added. This argument we consider fundamentally unsound and dangerous. Cranberries have always been eaten with turkey—not chicken—and who is this so-called Federation of Cranberry and Chicken Fanciers to demand change? A bunch of foreigners, we'll warrant. Of course, it has been suggested that the "federation" may have something to do with the cranberry industry—even though it calls itself a "nonprofit, nonpolitical organization founded by a small group of pioneering gourmets." Whatever it is, we don't like it, and we think the FBI should investigate.

Lie Detectors

It appears that Officer Isao Katsuna, a member of the Tokyo police force, has invented a new lie detector which actually blushes whenever a mendacity is recorded on it. The principle seems to be that whenever a suspect who is being examined by the apparatus endeavors to deceive his inquisitor the effort causes an excess secretion of sweat in the palms which in some way, not very lucidly explained, lights up a red neon tube. At the same time a quickening of the pulse causes a gong to sound, and thus the miscreant is confounded both visually and aurally.

This apparatus, as described, seems to have the merit of being somewhat more emphatic than the famous Keeler polygraph which is still, we believe, the standard mechanical device for registering truthful and untruthful responses. As we understand it, the polygraph is equipped with various needles which record the pulse, respiration, blood pressure and so on of the examinate. As long as he answers truthfully these needles inscribe a series of gentle and not ungraceful undulations, indicative of a mental state of repose and tranquillity. But at every departure from strict veracity the needles, it is said, become violently agitated and the marks on the recording paper assume an appearance suggestive of wornout bedsprings. There is also a chemical method of lie detection, which we understand is used rather more frequently in psychiatry than in police work. Here the examinate is put into a hypnotic condition by a dose of sodium pentathol or some similar drug, and while under its influence is interrogated about certain matters which in his conscious condition he might evade or resist.

Before the invention of lie detectors, the test of the truth or falsity of statements involving matters where the facts were in doubt was merely one of credibility. Since there is as far as we know no mechanism to check up on the veracity of lie detectors, this still seems to be the case, and perhaps it explains the reluctance of courts to admit the findings of lie detectors as evidence. An interesting experiment, however, made some years ago in a State hospital for the insane showed that it is possible for a lie detector to register a lie when the examinate was telling the gospel truth and vice versa. That is to say, a patient who believed himself to be Napoleon, would under interrogation deny that he believed any such thing, whereupon the needle would vibrate wildly. The psychiatrist who made the expetiment said that it proved that the device could be useful in discovering those patients who pretended to be sane when they were actually as batty as could be.

This, of course, is to define a lie as a statement not necessarily contrary to fact but merely contrary to belief. Thus there seems to be little hope for an adaptation of the lie detector which would enable us to determine the degree of truthfulness in political speeches, book blurbs, advertisements and so on, since persons who prepare them seem to do so by effort of will which enables them to believe what they wish to believe.

Merci Beaucoup

Engineers, it now seems, are destined to play a considerable role in this election campaign. The most prominent of the whole profession, Mr. Herbert Hoover, has been mentioned more than once in not-too-complimentary context by the Democratic candidate. And one of the least prominent until then, the engineer of Mr. Dewey's campaign special who backed the train up inopportunely at the town of Beaucoup, Ill., got himself called a "lunatic" by his principal passenger. A little slow on the uptake, the Democrats are now making the most of this Trumanlike blunder by turning it against its author.

The word "efficiency," an adjective applied by Republicans with loving approval both to Mr. Dewey's New York State administration and to Mr. Hoover's tenure in the White House, figures prominently in the Democratic oratory. Mr. Barkley chides the New Yorker for suggesting that his engineer ought to be shot at sunrise as a penalty for inefficiency. That, Mr. Barkley intimates, is not the way we do things in this country—and of course he knows that it was not meant seriously by Mr. Dewey.

This sniping about the efficiency of engineers may not be the high point of the campaign debate on public affairs and their solution. But it is the high point of what passes as humor in a political campaign. And for that, as for other small things, let us be thankful. Were it not for the incident at Beaucoup, Messrs. Truman and Barkley would have only one engineer to work out on—and Mr. Hoover's qualities make him a hard man to joke about.

Wind-whipped willows

Sighing to hear
The brook's clear note
Clotting to silence

Silent, they stand

Dewey-Dulles

Surely I must be one of many to protest your editorial of October 21 about the Dewey-Dulles activities in Europe. I could not believe that your newspaper, my help in objective thinking for 17 years, would swallow the Dewey "unity" propaganda so far as to say: "Only an immovable decision in Albany not to encourage the American people to tear themselves apart because of the world crisis could be responsible for the performance of Dulles."

Decision in Albany, indeed! Since when was our capital moved to Albany? Can't Mr. Dewey wait until he gets to Washington before he gets as pontifical as Mr. Lippmann on Washington and world affairs?

Your writer speaks of Cordell Hull "arguing" with Mr. Dewey. What really happened in your well-presented story of Hull vs. Dewey was that Mr. Hull actually turned the brash young Tom over his knee for a much-needed chastisement. Seriously, Cordell Hull's dream of furthering world peace through reciprocal trade relations (almost shattered by the Eightieth Congress) on which he labored for so many years was almost a generation ahead of the international thinking of Messrs. Dewey and Dulles.

This is not a partisan comment. My whole big family's preference for President was Senator Vandenberg, though our clan includes New Dealers, Republicans and some Democrats. The eldest and most beloved member of the clan is a member of the Eightieth Congress, himself a recognized liberal, who reported after the convention in Philadelphia that the Dewey capture of the nomination was the smoothest, fastest, cleverest work he had ever seen in many decades of political history.

I say this only to show that my judgment is not without political understanding. And that very understanding makes me conclude that we would rather see our country's welfare in the hands of sincere, courageous, forthright President Truman than in the control of the Dewey-Dulles team. M. R. B.

Editor's Note: There was no reflection on Mr. Hull—merely a note of pleased wonder that the unity on basic foreign policy is so firmly established that on the eve of the election, there is argument over the person that initiated it.

Feller's High Pitch

May I crawl out from under the hot stove long enough to say it does not seem to me that Mr. Irenaeus McClosky's urbane and scholarly defense of your editorial writer (letter published October 19) necessarily invalidates the point I was trying to make in my letter of October 15?

My point was, as I recall, that it is inherently unsound to expect a reporter to be skilled enough as a political scientist, economist, criminologist and psychoanalyst to correctly assess the "social science component" of every story he covers, and, further, that even editorial writers, who presumably have a more complete equipment for such tasks, are by no means infallible.

As an illustration I cited your editorial writer's explanation of why Mr. Sain managed to cross up the redoubtable Mr. Feller and to set the stage for the winning run in that first World Series game in Boston—an explanation which to a person with only a generalized knowledge of baseball seemed wholly unsound.

It was my assumption, of course, that your editorial writer's knowledge of baseball was adequate but not profound; that he knew the general principles of altitude and arc, but that he had somehow gotten his conclusion reversed.

Now if the editorial writer weighed all of the factors enumerated by Mr. McClosky; if his conclusion was based upon a profound knowledge of aerodynamics; of the secret intentions of Mr. Feller and Mr. Hegan; and of the prescience and timing of Mr. Sain—a hypothesis which, by the way, is no more absurdly loaded with ifs than is that of Mr. McClosky's—then his conclusion may have been sound and my illustration ill chosen.

But if he accidentally reached a sound conclusion from a set of false premises—and I think there is ground for such a belief—then, it seems to me, my argument is immeasureably fortified because it is unsafe to depend upon such happy accidents.

It couldn't be, could it, that Mr. Irenaeus McClosky was himself the writer of the disputed editorial?

Consistent Dixiecrats?

In their struggle against civil rights during the current campaign the Dixiecrats have laid great emphasis upon "State' Rights" and "local self-government." Will the Dixiecrats in the Eighty-first Congress still be strong for "local self-government" when home rule for the District of Columbia comes up?

Columnists Rebuked

Isn't it about time the publishers of newspapers got rid of some paid columnists and gave amateurs a chance?

When Pearson & Co. come out with such asinine statements as the following, readers have a right to howl: 223 out of 253 West Pointers got promotions; 52 per cent of the card-carrying Communists are in Dewey's State of New York and Warren's State of California.

We spend millions to train the best of our young men to be ready for another Pearl Harbor, and then your paid columnist gripes because the fellows who taught them knew their stuff.

We know that California and New York are the populous States of the Union; that it isn't a crime to be a Communist—not yet; and that the best headquarters are those where the best contacts can be made, but your paid columnist implies that Dewey and Warren are responsible for the presence and the location of the Communists.

Atrocity Film

Your account on October 23 of the Nazi atrocity film shown to newspaper reporters should be given front-page preference. It was my personal thought when these atrocities were first uncovered that a film should be made of the evidence and that such a film be shown periodically to every American citizen as a grim reminder of the extremes to which a government based upon hatred, bigotry and enslavement of the individual can extend itself. If the liberties guaranteed by our own Constitution do not in themselves take the place of the showing of such films, then there is another alternative, regardless of how inhuman and disgusting such a film may be.

Lincoln's Birthplace

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d (letter published October 1) seems to be a bit loose on his use of adjectives. In my letter of October 11 I nowhere characterized the Lincoln cabin encased in a million dollar marble mausoleum as a "gigantic hoax." All I did was to produce reliable contemporary evidence that the cabin in which Abraham Lincoln was said to have been born was removed from its original site and every vestige of it obliterated, as far back as 1815.

I have no quarrel with the National Park Service. It is not responsible for the Lincoln cabin hoax. The late Robert Collier, publisher of Collier's Weekly, is the person who perpetrated it. He bought the log cabin from a fakir, secured the funds for building the mausoleum, and then erected it. That happened many, many years ago. The National Park Service inherited the hoax in 1933.

Those were very pretty words the general quoted from the Park Service leaflet, beginning: "On a raw frontier farm of rolling land . . . was born the man (Abraham Lincoln)." As an amateur student of such things, I would be happy if the historian who wrote them could prove what he wrote. According to such records as I have seen, nobody knows when or where the aforesaid Mr. Lincoln was born.

Tucked away in the Library of Congress—but not in the Lincoln collection, where it surely belongs—is a little book called The Sorrows of Nancy. It was written by Lucinda Rogers Boyd, daughter of an eminent Kentucky clergyman and published in 1899. This book is the biography of Nancy Hanks, the mother of Abraham Lincoln.

In it the author quotes this from an affidavit made by one of the chief justices of Kentucky, to wit: "The late Colonel ——, a prominent man in the Kentucky Legislature, said to me: 'I heard —— ——, then a resident of Harrodsburg, Ky., say that he had married Nancy Hornbeck Hanks, or Sparrow, in Washington County, Ky., to Thomas Lincoln, and that at the time of the marriage of the said Nancy Hornbeck Hanks, or Sparrow, and Thomas Lincoln, that Nancy's son (afterward called Lincoln) was a boy large enough to run around.'"

Some 22 years ago a reputable and widely known editor in North Carolina came into my office at Asheville and told me this story: "In the mountains above Winston-Salem there long existed a Moravian church, which dated back to the eighteenth century. It had one pastor who served it for same 60 years. He kept a record of all baptisms, confirmations, funerals and other church events. Some years ago, while on a visit there, on looking through those old records I came upon this item: 'A young woman named Nancy Hanks brought her baby here today and I baptized him. She named him Abraham.' I do not recall the date of the entry, but think it was 1805."

"It is impossible to say with certainty that Abraham Lincoln was born in Larue County, Ky., or in Kentucky at all." Some day the historian of the National Park Service may write these words. I myself think he was born in North Carolina, where it is known that Nancy Hanks lived for some years before going to Kentucky. But who can prove that?

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Strange Alliance

THE GENTLE plea for unity sounds very strange against the background of the urgent Republican necessity of this final week of the campaign. That necessity is to win a majority in the Senate in order to organize the upper chamber.

The Republicans could make a powerful argument which would appeal to the independent voter. They could point out that with a Democratic majority key committee positions would be held by aging and reactionary Southern Democrats. These tired bourbons could be expected to oppose all the promise that their own candidate seems to hold out.

But that argument is not being made. Or, at any rate, it is not being made by anyone with sufficient voice to carry it to the Nation. Instead, the appeal for unity falls on the voters' ears with all the vigorous impact of a feather falling on velvet.

Strange as this may seem at first blush, the reason is not hard to find. It lies in the fact that Republican orators are going through the South proclaiming that the Southern Democrat and the Republican are one and the same, brothers in the bond in purpose and performance.

This is, of course, for Southern consumption. It is aimed at catching the electoral votes of those Southern States which, thanks to the Dixiecrats, may end up in the Republican column. We find Senator Robert A. Taft saying in a campaign speech in Nashville, Tenn.:

"Today the world has changed. The Truman party favors a complete control in Washington. The Republican Party believes in freedom, and its position is not substantially different from that of most Southern Democrats."

IF THAT is what the Republicans really believe, then no independent voter will get very excited about saving the Senate for the Grand Old Party. To have the Democrats organize the Senate, with Southerners in key posts, should be just dandy from the Republican point of view.

On the basis of the Taft formula, they would undoubtedly welcome Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee as chairman of the Appropriations Committee. McKellar is 79 years old. As the willing handmaiden of Boss Crump of Memphis, he has generally been on the side of reaction.

Chairman of the Finance Committee would be Walter F. George of Georgia, who is 70 years old. George is a scholar and a gentleman in the tradition of another day. But repeatedly he has served powerful private interests that have sought to keep the South in convenient economic bondage to the North.

Chairman of Foreign Relations would be Tom Connally of Texas, who is 71 years old. It is an understatement to say that he is too often tactless and high-handed in his conduct on the committee, needlessly irritating those on whom a sound, bipartisan policy depends.

ON THE Banking and Currency Committee, the ranking Democrat is Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York. But Wagner has been absent from the Senate because of illness for many months, and he was in the headlines recently when his family reported to the police that he had disappeared from his home. Presumably he would not be able to act as chairman.

The next Democrat in line is Senator Burnet R. Maybank of South Carolina. South Carolina, the home of Gov. Strom Thurmond, is one of the three or four States which will go to the Dixiecrats on November 2.

Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, who is 72, would be chairman of the Agriculture Committee. Thomas has been repeatedly charged with using confidential information to speculate on the cotton market.

Not a Southerner, but in the same age bracket is Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada. At 72, he would be chairman of the Judiciary Committee. McCarran's views could hardly be described as forward-looking.

Forty-six-year-old Thomas E. Dewey, who promises the clean sweep of a new broom, knows how to go to town on this if he were of a mind to. He could show how these Southerners get set on the escalator of seniority and stay there until it carries them up to key positions in which they can block and obstruct what does not please them.

But the odds are against Candidate Dewey hitting hard on this issue. It might offend Southern voters and cost a few electoral votes thereby scaling down the electoral landslide so confidently expected by the men who have managed the Dewey campaign.

Southerners by their protest votes will increase the Dewey total. But it would be a mistake to count on Southern support in the Senate after November 2.

Hume's Recital

It came as quite a surprise to me, as it must have to many other readers, to note the rather sharp commentary which one of your correspondents felt impelled to make (October 22) on the song recital presented October 17 by your music editor, Mr. Paul Hume. Having had the good fortune to hear Mr. Hume's concert, I extend congratulations to The Washington Post for its wisdom in choosing as its music editor not only an acute critic whose prose style makes consistently good reading but also a musician of exceptional quality.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Few Brass Tacks

AFTER the election there will come into the foreground of discussion of foreign policy the condition of the budget and its impact on the American economy. The whole relationship between East and West will be greatly affected by the decisions which the Dewey Administration and the Congress decide to take, or are compelled to take by the acts of the Soviet government.

LIPPMANN

THUS FAR American rearmament and foreign aid have been supported in this country by the surplus of a peacetime economy. Without controls and without rationing, but only by a high level of taxation and a considerable inflation, the American economy is providing about 20 billion dollars worth of goods and services over and above what the American people are themselves consuming.

This is just about the limit of what can be provided in a peacetime economy. American industries are, as the National City Bank's letter puts it, "in the aggregate turning out about all that the supply of labor and materials will permit."

THEREFORE, substantial increase in the armaments program, additional sums for European military lend lease, and for assistance to China, must mean a return to something like a wartime level of taxation and to the essential wartime controls over industry. Even now, with the present programs and after the recent tax cut, the current budget is in fact almost certainly unbalanced.

There is a probable deficit of income as against outgo which approximates two billion dollars. Our own defense establishment will probably be asking several billions more, and foreign aid, even if there is some reduction in the Marshall Plan amounts will, with military lend lease, be at least as big, probably bigger, than it is this year.

THE DIPLOMATIC consequences of this condition of affairs should be considered very seriously indeed in every foreign office.

The Kremlin, first of all, will need to understand them. What the Russians need most of all to understand is that we are now at the limit of what the American economy can provide by way of arms and foreign aid under a peacetime economy. But the American economy could provide much more if it were on a war footing. Though the public and the Congress will not want to go on a war footing, they will be driven to it by an aggressive Soviet action in any part of the world or by provocation that appears to have no end.

So in deciding how they propose to deal with Dewey, the thing which Stalin and Molotov need most of all to weigh is whether they will push this country from a peace to a war economy. They do not have to fear that we shall use the atomic bomb in a preventive war; they can be confident that it will be maintained as a deterrent and as a reprisal against military aggression. But if they are the realists they like to think they are, they will fear anything which would push this country over the line between a peace and a war economy. For if that happened, there would be war. It would be impossible for this country to accept the restraints and the sacrifice of a war economy except in time of war. A totalitarian state might remain on a war footing without waging war; a democracy like our own could not.

IT IS important also that other governments and peoples should understand the implications and the consequences of the situation here. If the tension becomes more and more acute during the coming year, if the likelihood of real war increases, our own preoccupation with military power will impair profoundly our interest and our faith in European recovery and reconstruction. The greater the danger of war, the harder it would be to argue that large sums should be invested in the rehabilitation of the continent, including western Germany.

What, for example, it will be said, is the sense of rebuilding the Ruhr just before the Red Army captures it? Will it not be better to expand American steel production? Nor will it be easy to contend with the argument of the American military leaders that the most profitable military investment abroad will be in those peripheral places that the American forces believe they need and think they can use.

THESE ARE, it seems to me, some of the real and controlling considerations, now obscured by Communist propaganda and Vishinsky's invective, by the ghost-written retorts and repartee, and by the smart alec debaters who have been having a field day in Paris. When the election is over, when the budget is presented and Congress takes hold of it, the issues which will emerge is whether this country is to cross the Rubicon and enter a wartime economy.

Before that happens, the consequences will have to be spelled out clearly to all the statesmen, including the Russians but not excluding our own, not excluding Mr. Bevin, not excluding the leaders of Germany. Then matters will indeed come to a head. For then it will be much clearer than it is now how impossible it is to regard the cold war as something which can be continued indefinitely, how imperative it is for all concerned to begin at long last a really serious negotiation.

Threat To Solidarity

By Sumner Welles

Latin Intervention, Balkan Style

THE DANGER to inter-American solidarity and to our own security caused by the interventionist activities of the men controlling the governments of Guatemala, Costa Rica and Venezuela is steadily becoming more acute.

As a result of the charges made in this column that these regimes were seeking to overthrow neighboring governments, the Foreign Minister of Guatemala and the embassies of Costa Rica and of Venezuela in Washington have issued official denials.

These denials afford an interesting study in political psychology. The arguments employed range from the accusation that I have a partiality for dictatorships to the assertion that I am ignorant of inter-American affairs. They include the claim that the hemisphere agreement upon nonintervention, the keystone in the arch of the inter-American system and, for so long, the supreme aspiration of all Latin America, has become a symbol of an "outmoded" Pan-Americanism. Perhaps the most diverting argument is the statement that the "new Latin America" must distinguish between "dictators" and "men who control governments."

ON OCTOBER 15 General Somoza, Nicaraguan Minister of War, previously President of that republic, publicly charged that the governments of Costa Rica, Guatemala and Venezuela were conniving to bring about the downfall of the government of Honduras, and subsequently of the governments of Nicaragua and El Salvador.

He called attention to the international force known as the Caribbean Legion now established in Central America whose avowed aim is the overthrow of several American governments. He cited the number of its effectives, the amount and origin of its munitions, the location of its training centers, and the nature of the assistance given it by the governments he accused.

Many Americans are inclined to ignore General Somoza's charges because they disapprove the political system in Nicaragua for which he is responsible. It cannot be denied that General Somoza has long been Nicaragua's "strong man" nor that his country does not enjoy our kind of democratic government.

It may not be amiss, however, to recall that after Pearl Harbor the United States had no more loyal nor wholehearted ally in the war to save democracy than the Nicaraguan government of which General Somoza was then President.

THE PRESENT issue, however, is not whether we approve or disapprove the governments of other American republics, provided their national policies offer no threat to the peace of the hemisphere nor to the legitimate rights of their neighbors. The issue is whether the Organization of American States is willing to permit several of its members to persist in violating their contractual obligation not to intervene in the internal concerns of their sovereign neighbors and to assume the right to overthrow the governments of other republics in order to replace these governments with regimes of their own ideology.

The nature of the devious strategy pursued was thus accurately analyzed by Dr. Penzini Hernandez, a noted publicist of Venezuela, in an article in El Universal of Carcacas of October 9:

"A double diplomacy is now being employed: By means of the first variety, with cards on the table, loyalty is promised by the United States and cordial Pan-Americanism to the peoples of the continent; and by means of the second, discord is secretly stimulated among other peoples of the Americas, and revolutions are fostered against other governments."

IN A world in which first the Axis powers, and more recently the Soviet Union, have all but obliterated international law and civilized standards of comity and decency in the relations between states, the inter-American system has remained an example of an international relationship based on law, justice, friendly cooperation and the maintenance of peace.

The new world is now witnessing the disgraceful spectacle of the abandonment by several American governments of the enlightened standards which have in recent years distinguished the Western Hemisphere in order to emulate the practices presently current in the Balkans.

With Moscow's backing, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and Albania have for three years been financing and arming a revolutionary force in an attempt to overthrow the legitimate government of Greece. The pretext offered is that this government is "undemocratic." What valid distinction can be made between this example of international nihilism, and the assistance being given a revolutionary army in Central America by a group of American governments for the purpose of bringing about the downfall of other governments that they term "undemocratic?"

The disintegration of the inter-American system will be inevitable unless a remedy is promptly found. The proper solution is for those governments that believe themselves to be endangered by the policies and activities of their neighbors to appeal officially to the Organization of American States so that these threats to the peace of the hemisphere may be impartially investigated and so that remedial action may then be taken.

At this moment of crisis in our relations with the Soviet Union, it would be hard to imagine a greater danger to the safety of the United States than the chaotic conditions that would be created by civil war or inter-American hostilities in a region which is adjacent to the Panama Canal, and only a few hundred miles from our own borders.

Heart Rhythm 'Abnormality' Held Normal

Miami, Fla., Oct. 25 (AP).—Your heart can have abnormal rhythm and still be okay, the Southern Medical Association was told today—but you should have a check-up, just in case.

Dr. David A. Nathan of Miami said abnormally rapid and slow beating of the heart as well as "pounding" or "flutter" can occur in normal hearts as well as in hearts afflicted with organic disease.

In fact, he told the opening session of the association's forty-second annual meeting, practically all of the abnormal type rhythms found in organic heart disease have been demonstrated in normal hearts.

Abnormal rhythms in otherwise healthy hearts, he said, are due to such things as worry and fear; acute infections in another part of the body, such as severe tonsillitis and pneumonia; bodily disturbances resulting from overindulgence in alcohol, coffee, tobacco or drugs; and overactivity of the thyroid gland.

All of these causative factors may be correctable, he said, adding that abnormal rhythms in otherwise normal hearts rarely, if ever, shorten the span of life.

But he emphasized that in any case where an abnormal rhythm exists, it is necessary that a doctor be consulted so that it can be determined whether it is due to actual heart disease, or just a "functional" disturbance of an otherwise healthy organ.

Coroner's Verdict Frees 9 in Circus Killing

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Nine members of the Dailey Brothers Circus were released today after a coroner's jury ruled that a 19-year-old roustabout met death by "beating at the hands of a person or persons unknown."

The body of William Pettit, Louisville, Ky., was found wrapped in a tarpaulin beneath tanbark in a circus wagon. The entire company was taken into custody but only nine members were held for the inquest.

Prince Georges School Shifts Announced

New personnel shifts in Prince Georges County schools were announced yesterday by G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent.

Major changes were the appointment of Miss Emma Bowman, principal of Beltsville School, as a supervisor of elementary schools, and John P. Speicher, Greenbelt High School principal, as superintendent of high schools. Both will assume their duties November 1.

Appointment of Miss Bowman created a new elementary school district, under a redistricting program increasing the number of districts from three to four.

Miss Bowman will be succeeded at Beltsville by Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Long, teacher at Greenbelt Junior High. Speicher's position will be filled by M. E. Hernick, currently principal of Gwynn Park High.

Hernick will be succeeded by Bartlett Dorr, now assistant principal at Gwynn Park.

Shugart also announced that Miss Mary A. Thompson, now head of the women's physical education department at Kalamazoo (Mich.) Teachers' College, has accepted the post of supervisor of health education in the county. She will assume her duties not later than February 1, 1949.

Md. Group Hits Regents' Release On Negro Students

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP). — The Maryland Committee for Equal Educational Opportunities today took issue with an announcement by the University of Maryland Board of Regents, which said applicants for graduate schools are considered without regard to race.

In a formal statement, Howard H. Murphy, chairman of the group, said that in practice this had been true only in the law school, while Negro applicants to other graduate schools have been refused through "various subterfuges."

The statement said that in some cases the university had failed to reply to Negro applicants.

The statement by the Board of Regents, which denied racial discrimination in graduate school admissions, came Friday after an all-day hearing on the advisability of setting up Negro graduate schools.

The committee's statement added that the regents' assertion should result in a cessation of discrimination in the future, and said it welcomed this "declaration of policy."

Hard Work Helped Reliefer to Save $6410, He Claims

David Feldman tried to explain to Magistrate Hyman Bushel how he became involved in a scuffle with Morris Unger, 65.

"I gave his son $6410 to buy me a house," he said.

Asked how he managed to save that much money while on relief, Feldman replied:

"I worked hard. In the 13 years I've been on home relief I worked seven years as a bootblack and a porter and saved the money."

Feldman was sent to jail on a disorderly conduct count. The Welfare Department was notified to investigate this case.

Newark-D. C. Flight Made in 34 Minutes

From Newark to Washington in 34 minutes was experienced yesterday by 20 passengers of an Eastern Airlines Constellation.

The company announced that this flight cut 19 minutes from Eastern's best previous time between those airports and 26 minutes from the scheduled time from loading ramp to loading ramp.

Favorable winds were credited with helping the five-member crew to average 370 miles an hour on the flight with a top speed of 406 miles.

Churches Sought For Greenbelt

Delegations from Greenbelt, Md., churches will meet with Housing and Home Finance Agency officials Wednesday to discuss the possibility of obtaining church building sites in that government-owned community.

Religious services now are conducted in a theater and community building. Legal obstacles thus far have prevented the government from selling or transferring building sites for churches.

So much for the cloth! Then we asked a foremost American tailor to give us some men's suits worthy of these wonderful fabrics. This they have done.

D. C. Employe Blood Bank Is Launched

Heads of District Government departments yesterday met in the District Building to discuss plans for building up a blood bank among employes.

With their chairman, John W. Tramburg, District director of Public Welfare, the agency heads heard Red Cross representatives explain the operation of the blood bank center.

Tramburg said the plan is to have one donor each month for each 100 District government employes. Taken on the whole, this would mean between 170 and 180 donors per month, Tramburg said. He added, however, that policemen and firemen will not be asked to participate since they are called on to give blood in emergencies.

Tramburg said arrangements would be made with the Red Cross to run a "jumper bus" for blood donors in District offices. Volunteers will be given physical check-ups before they are permitted to donate blood, he said.

Tramburg said the next step will be appointment of key men in each District agency to coordinate the program.

One on the Aisle—

Throttlebottom Still the Zany

By Richard L. Coe

Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom.

What? You don't find him in your almanac? Look again. He was Vice President under John P. Wintergreen in the closing years of the last Republican administration. That was when "Of Thee I Sing" won the Pulitzer Prize Play Award in 1932.

Throttlebottom, as Victor Moore used to explain so apologetically night after night, lived at 1448 Z st.—"with the other boarders. It's an awfully good place. Mrs. Spiegelbaum's. It's a great place, if you like Kosher cooking."

Asked what he did as Vice President, Throttlebottom used to explain: "He sits around in the parks and feeds the pigeons and takes walks and goes to the movies. The other day he was going to join the library, but he had to have two references, so he couldn't get in."

It took a guide to explain to Vice President Throttlebottom that one of his duties was to preside over the Senate. "Over what?" asked Mr. T. "The Senate. You know what the Senators are, don't you?"

"Sure—I saw them play yesterday."

Throttlebottom's great moment was when he tried to get the Senate to impeach President Wintergreen. All sorts of things got in the way, including the Senator from Massachusetts' efforts to have the Senate vote a pension to Paul Revere's horse, Jenny. This was cleared up, however, when someone pointed out that Jenny had died in 1805, at which the Senate devoted a minute of silent tribute to the departed horse from Massachusetts.

But It Was No Movie

For a time it looked as though Throttlebottom might make it. The French Ambassador took up the cause of the jilted First Lady, Diana Devereaux, "the illegitimate daughter of an illegitimate son of an illegitimate nephew of Napoleon." Wily Wintergreen, however, won everybody over because he was about to become a father, so Throttlebottom switched his stand because: "This country has never yet impeached an expectant father."

Victor Moore's experiences in playing the role evidently have upset his memories, for in a special article written for the Dewey forces he recalls:

"I once played a part in a motion picture and in one scene I got lost in the White House." And in presenting his speech, the Dewey HQ remarks, "He was particularly effective in a vice presidential roles in an important movie."

I say upset his memory, because one of the outstanding qualities of "Of Thee I Sing" was that it never did become a movie; nobody ever dared risk putting its satiric barbs on exportable celluloid. Mr. Moore, in fact, never played a Vice President in any movie.

Since Mr. Moore recalls making a movie which never was made, it probably explains my confusion over just who is on the Dewey bandwagon.

He calls himself Victor Moore, but in saying that he remembers being the little man who wasn't there in a movie that wasn't made, I'm afraid he's really Throttlebottom. And you know Throttlebottom.

THE POLITICAL LIFE also occupies the University Players of G. W. . . The group's first play of the season will be "The Great Campaign," Arnold Sundgaard's story of a farmer who tries to break into bigtime politics . . . S. & L. Savings In Record Rise Of 1.2 Billion

By S. Oliver Goodman

Savings and loan associations will show a record gain of $1,200,000,000 in savings this year, William K. Divers predicted yesterday.

Divers

Divers, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, declared that in recent months, however, there has been a noticeable reduction in the rate of growth of savings accounts. Addressing a session of the National Savings & Loan League in French Lick, Ind., he urged that home finance institutions raise their sights and set a goal of a net increase of two billion dollars for 1949.

"Based upon the experience of this year to date," he said, "it is estimated that mortgages held by associations will increase during 1949 by about $1,225,000,000 . . . To meet this requirement and to maintain or augment their holdings of cash and Government bonds, associations must attract a greater volume of savings."

He added that on September 30 the 2600 insured loan associations held some 7.9 billions of the public's savings, representing a gain of 14 per cent during the previous 12 months.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Joe V. Cummins, president of the Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, will talk tonight on "Synthetic Detergents" at a meeting of the Club Managers Association in Metropolitan Club . . . Spencer Shore, New York investment banker, has been elected president of Eagle-Picher Co. of Cincinnati, effective next January 1 . . . John W. Newy, recently resigned as vice president of United Air Lines, and William L. Ayers, founder of the public relations firm bearing his name, announced yesterday formation of the Newy-Ayers organization. The new firm will have its principal office in New York and a branch in Washington.

RULING ASKED: The SEC is studying whether Engineers Public Service Co. may subscribe to part of the additional common stock to be offered by Virginia Electric & Power Co. APPROVAL GIVEN: The Civil Aeronautics Board has opened the way for Capital Airlines to inaugurate nightly 'Sky-coach' service between Chicago and New York City early in November. Capital originally asked for permission to begin such service on October 15, but this was denied upon protest of United Air Lines. The 'sky-coach' service will have a 4-cent a mile rate, compared with the general passenger fare level of from 5.5 cents to 6 cents a mile.

EARNINGS: Reynolds Metals Co. reported consolidated net profit og $5,057,153 for nine months ended September 30, equal to $4.30 a common share. Comparison was unavailable because prior to December 31, 1947, interim reports included Robertshaw-Fulton Controls Co. which was 50 per cent sold by Reynolds on October 31, 1947. Ingram Invites National League to End Pro 'War'

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL League's passion for solitude in the pro football business is getting to be an expensive hobby. They're still looking down their collective noses at the upstart All-America Conference and sniffing with disdain but there's some doubt as to what the NFL club owners have to be so proud about. This is no time for 'em to put on airs.

POVICH

There was small, if any, comfort for the NFL people in the Monday morning papers which revealed that NFL teams, meeting in five games, were out-drawn by four All-America Conference games. The National League crowds averaged 21,371. The average All-America game drew 26,913. That isn't enough. The money that was lost in both leagues on Sunday was plenty. The suicidal war between the leagues threatens to pauperize the whole pro football business.

On a half dozen occasions the All-America has extended the olive branch of peace toward the NFL which is stubbornly insisting it got there first and will have no business with the new league. The NFL was the first in the field but the continual financial raps it is taking threatens to leave too many of the clubs long on pedigree and short on cash. Not that the Conference isn't hurting, also. A lot of their clubs are barrelling toward bankruptcy.

THAT WAS a pretty sad turn-out at Milwaukee where only 13,433 customers watched the Redskins against the Green Bay Packers. It was a perfect football day. The Packers have long been Milwaukee favorites. The Redskins were supposed to have a drawing card in Sammy Baugh. Yet the stadium wasn't half full. Only 20,191 saw the Los Angeles Rams at Detroit. The Champion Cardinals drew only 23,423 at Chicago against Boston. The Eagles clicked nicely with 36,227 against the Bears, though. But only 13,343 saw the Giants-Steelers at the Polo Grounds.

In the All-America there was little to be proud about attendance-wise, except at Cleveland where the Browns and Yankees drew 46,812. At San Francisco, where the two division leaders, the 49'ers and the Baltimore Colts met, the game fetched only 27,978 customers. At Los Angeles, the Dons drew only 26,818 against Buffalo. Sorriest figure, though, was the mere 5964 who rattled around in the 100,000 capacity of Soldiers Field for the Rockets-Brooklyn thing.

Most significant perhaps was the Giants playing to less than 14,000 on a day when they had the pro football stage in New York to themselves. In years past, that kind of a crowd might have been called a good one, but in these days of inflated player payrolls and $15,000 guarantees to the visiting club, it is woeful.

MICKEY McBRIDE, the rich owner of the Cleveland club, asserted yesterday that the two leagues must get together on a common draft and dove-tail scheduling, or neither of them can survive. He's merely telling his own group and the NFL owners what they all know but are too stubborn to admit.

Player payrolls and monuses for signing are rocketing both leagues to ruin under the present set-up which finds the Chicago Bears, for example, with three $20,000-a-year quarter backs. As a result of the competitive bidding for players, some clubs are paying linemen as much as $15,000 a season. The Conference has a bit of an edge in one respect. Each club gets the revenue from 14 league games in contrast to the NFL's 12-game schedule.

But the Conference has the two sickest clubs in the business in the Chicago Rockets and Brooklyn Dodgers. Losing teams of that kind can cost their backers $300,000 a season, and that kind of bankrolling cannot last. The NFL has a problem club of it own, though in the Boston Yankees, who have been drawing as few as 7000 at home.

WHEN THE REDSKINS moved into Washington in 1937 from Boston, a pro football club was a far cheaper operation. The team could break even if it averaged 8000 fans a game. In these days, the Redskins' owners don't start making a dime unless more than 25,000 customers are in the park. Their biggest expense item is stadium rent of more than $70,000 a year.

Player payrolls of $250,000 are now common. That's what the leagues get for bidding against each other for talent and refusing to approve a common draft. The height of their spleen was illustrated last week at New York when the Giants and Yankees played home games within a mile of each other and divided the 65,000 fans that either club might have had exclusively with more business-like schedule making.

If the pro leagues are having it rough, and they are, it's still difficut to work up a case of sympathy for the NFL. The devitalizing war they're waging is their own fault. At least the Conference is asking for an honorable peace. The NFL wants only unconditional surrender. Nobody is winning the battle.

LEADERS IN SHOOT—These four crack shots set the pace yesterday in the first day's firing of the National Pistol Championships on the Marine Corps range at Quantico, Va. Left to right: T/Sergt. Huelet L. Benner, Fort Knox, Ky., defending champion, 878 points; Sergt. Harry Reeves, Detroit police force, 873; Lieut. Col. Walter R. Walsh, United States Marine Corps, Washington, D. Youel Finally Reports to Lions, 3 Hours Later He Goes to Rams

Detroit, Oct. 25 (AP).—Three hours after he reported to the Detroit Lions, Quarterback James Youel was traded today to the Los Angeles Rams of the National Professional Football League.

The Lions obtained Fullback Pat West from the Rams in what was described as a straight player deal.

West, 25, a 6-foot, 201-pound Southern California graduate, played with the Rams for three years.

Youel a week ago was a member of the Boston Yanks. They sent him to the Philadelphia Eagles on waivers. But Detroit exercised a prior right to claim him and he reported here today. Last season he was with the Washington Redskins.

Score: 122 to 0

Burlington, Wis., Oct. 25 (AP).—No one said "when" so the VFW Burlington Rockets didn't stop until they had 122 points.

The Rockets' foe was Byron, Ill., both semipro clubs.

If you'td like the details the Rockets tallied at the rate of once every three and one half minutes. There were 18 touchdowns in all and 14 extra points. Twelve of the touchdowns came on passes.

Oh, yes, Byron's score: Zero.

It's a Rough Game

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 25 (AP). In his first game as a Louisiana State U. varsity footballer, some opponent walked all over Halfback Billy Baggett's leg.

In his second, Billy just happened to lie down in time for a player to stomp on his face.

Which Way Did They Go?

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—It was during a tense moment in the Columbia-Princeton game.

A substitute halfback went in for Princeton, and the man he was replacing dutifully trotted off the field. Trouble was he went wrong way, squatted down next to Coach Lou Little in front of the Columbia bench and stayed there several minutes before he realized his ghastly mistake.

Stolen: 1000 Bleachers

Redwood City, Calif., Oct. 25 (AP).—Somebody stole our bleachers, the Redwood City Rodeo Association complained today.

Police looked. Sure enough, the bleachers—or enough of them to seat about 1000 people—were gone.

Denver Squad Arrives Early

Denver University's Pioneers will make their visit to Washington their "Trip of the Year" for Friday night's game with Georgetown at Griffith Stadium.

Headed by a coaching staff of three former All-Americans, the Coloradans will fly into Washington Wednesday in time for a workout at the ball park.

Johnny Baker, Southern California; Bob Seymour, University of Oklahoma and a former Washington Redskin, and Bud Kerr, Notre Dame, are Denver's top coaches.

The trip to the Nation's Capital will be only the second east of the Mississippi ever made by a Denver team. The Pioneers played Temple in Philadelphia in 1932.

Denver has an unusual schedule in that 8 of its 10 games this season are on the home field. Outside of its game here, Denver's only other away-from-home game was at Stillwater, Okla., where the Pioneers lost by 27-7.

D. C. Marine Ties for Lead In Pistol Shoot

Quantico, Va., Oct. 25.—Two Washington Marines were high up in the standings after the first day's pistol competition of the 64th National Rifle and Pistol Championships being held here.

One of them, Capt. Thurman Barrier, tied defending champion Tech. Sergt. Huelet Benner of Fort Knox for the lead. Both shot 878 out of a possible 900 points, using .22-caliber pistols.

In fourth place was Washington's Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh, with 872 points, one behind Harry Reeves of Detroit.

Two more 900-point sessions follow tomorrow and Wednesday, with .38- and .45-caliber weapons being used. The highest three-day point total will determine the new champ.

The rifle championship, a two-day affair, begins tomorrow. A close duel is expected between Arthur Cook, Washington's 20-year-old Olympic champ, and G. Wayne Moore, of Washington, Pa., the current United States titleholder.

T/Sergt. Huelet Benner, Fort Knox, Ky., 878.

'Skins Back From Green Bay Game With 'Lucky' Football

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

For the first time in two years, the Redskins "brought home a football" yesterday when they returned from Sunday's gratifying 23-7 victory over the Green Bay Packers in Milwaukee.

The ball used throughout the game, symbolizing the Washington pros' first road victory since November, 1946, was being jealously guarded by Center Clyde Ehrhardt. He and the rest of the banged-up Redskins are sure it's a lucky omen. They're just as positive, however, that luck played no part in Sunday's upset.

"Our line play decided it on the field," said Head Coach Turk Edwards, "but the difference in this game and last week's 45-0 loss to Philadelphia may go farther back than that."

"I freely admit I overworked the team before the Philadelphia game," Turk said. "I knew it as

Next Move Up to NFL, Says Admiral

By Hugh Fullerton, jr.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—In a public plea to end the "war" between the two big professional football leagues, Admiral Jonas Ingram, All-America Conference commissioner, today invited National Football League leaders to sit down and iron out the problems of a common draft and coordinated schedules for the two circuits.

Speaking at the weekly luncheon of the Metropolitan Football Writers Association, Ingram said he was opposed to all kinds of war and he believed a peaceful solution to the problem could be reached.

He insisted, however, that his talk was not an indication of weakness within his league, but rather that it was an effort to make his position clear in view of recent statements by club owners that some clubs would "fold" if the interleague tussle was not terminated.

Says AAC "Stronger Than Ever"

"The All-America Conference has been in existence three years and is now stronger than ever before," he said. "Our average attendance this year is better than ever before, although some clubs are weak. I am sure that in 1949 we will have the same eight clubs with even better players and eight of the finest coaching staffs in America."

Ingram emphasized that his talk was a public invitation to the National League club owners to hold a peace session, but added: "I think I have done practically all I can do. The next move should come from the National League. I am ready to meet anybody on a common plane at any place and any time."

The only questions holding up peaceful relations are those of the common draft of graduating college players and coordination of schedules in cities where both leagues have clubs, Ingram insisted. He is strongly opposed to any proposal that the two leagues be amalgamated.

He explained that this was only his personal opinion and that he was not speaking for the Conference in opposing a combination of the leagues.

"The two leagues now have a common respect for each other's contracts," Ingram said. "The thing they must have is the common draft. I am all for the player, but we all know players are getting too much money. No club can have three $20,000 quarterbacks. It has to fill the stands just to pay the quarterbacks."

A coordinated schedule would present some difficulties, but could be worked out just as it has been in baseball, he said.

"These things can be worked out very simply. If two or three men from each league would sit around a table, they could decide them in five minutes."

Questioned about recent statements by Dan Topping, New York Yankees owner, and Arthur (Mickey) McBride of Cleveland that some clubs could not survive if the war continued, the commissioner said:

Chicago to Be Stronger

"They were just honest enough to say what others think. It's a true statement. Our only weak club is Chicago and it will be in there next year stronger than ever.

"As for rumors that Paul Brown (Cleveland coach) is about to desert us and that Cleveland and San Francisco are ready to jump to the other league, we all get temperamental in the heat of things.

"Brown came to me once before and I told him 'Paul, you have a good job and no alumni to bother you.' I think he will be around for some time. And I have the assurance of Topping and McBride that they do not intend to jump."

Stand Together Or Fail—McBride

Cleveland, Oct. 25 (AP).—The two major pro football leagues must get together or they will not survive, Arthur (Mickey) McBride, owner of the Cleveland Browns, said today.

"I'd like to see a world series in football, just as we have in baseball," McBride said. "The only way either our league (the All-America Conference) or the National can survive is for us to get together."

Pick-The-Winners Lineup This Week

DUKE VS. GEORGIA TECH, North Carolina vs. Tennessee, Southern Methodist vs. Texas, California vs. Southern California.

Those are some of the tough ones to select this week in The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners contest.

Bear in mind that this is a contest of skill, designed to reward those who know their teams. Follow the accounts of the teams each week and make your selections accordingly.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post.

The contest each week will include 20 of the major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games.

A twenty-first (21st) game is listed on which "The Probable Score" will be given by each contestant.

Hansberry Wins Unanimous Decision Over Johnny Holt

Johnny Hansberry won a unanimous decision from Johnny Holt in the feature eight-rounder of an all Washington fight show last night at Turner's Arena, fighting the last three rounds with a broken right hand.

Dr. Don S. Knowlton examined the hand in Hansberry's dressing room after the fight and said that one of the knuckle bones was fractured.

Although the crowd of 523 put forth a loud dissent, the judges voted Red Gaddis a unanimous decision over Burt Wicks in the semi-final 8-rounder.

Walter Ham, 126½ was awarded a technical knockout over Jimmy Jennett at 1:18 in the third round of a scheduled five-rounder. In four-round preliminaries, Angelo Marini, 150, outpointed Dick Barber, 157, and Bobby Suma, 148, took a unanimous decision from Miles Jones, 143. Attendance was 523.

Lions Meet St. Louis Tonight

A severe blow to the Washington Lions' front line efficiency lies in prospect as they await word from American Hockey League President Maurice Podoloff on the status of Rightwinger Win Mausseau.

Mousseau was suspended by Podoloff after a battle Saturday night in Pittsburgh with the Hornets Phil Samis. Mousseau broke his stick over the Hornet defenseman's back and drew a match-misconduct penalty for it. He'll be out indefinitely pending action by Podoloff.

To fill the gap, Coach Frank Beisler will take the wraps off Hank Goldup tonight when the Lions take the ice against the St. Louis Flyers. Goldup was once a New York Ranger and more recently played right wing with the Cleveland Barons.

Appearing with the Flyers will Johnny (Choo Choo) Mariucci, a bruising defenseman who used to please Washington fans during the war while playing with the Coast Guard team from Curtis Bay, Md.

Tawney Improving

Baltimore Passes Scalping Ordinance

William J. Muth, vice president of the council, said the ordinance was drawn up because "residents of Baltimore are being deprived of tickets for the Navy-Norte Dame football game here Saturday."

Testudo's Not Lost After All

Testudo, Maryland U's bronze 450-pound terrapin, isn't missing after all.

He was reported missing Sunday when he couldn't be found atop his stand in front of Ritchie Coliseum. A search yesterday, however, located him in the office of Maryland Basketball Coach Flucie Stewart.

Stewart said he didn't have the vaguest idea of how Testudo found his way into the office, but he would be greatly obliged if his guardians would remove him as he's already cramped for space in his tiny gymnasium office.

Navy Faces Irish, Army And Michigan

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IF THERE'S ANY doubt about Navy's football schedule being the toughest in the country, take a peek at these facts: Notre Dame, Michigan and Army, three of the four teams the winless Middies must face are unbeaten and untied . . . Of the five teams the Sailors have already been beaten by, three (California, Pennsylvania and Duke) have yet to taste defeat while the other two, Cornell and Missouri, have been licked only once . . . Six of the nine teams on Navy's back-breaking schedule were in the Associated Press' first 10 last week . . .

ITLL probably be a long, long time before William and Mary schedules just anybody to fill an open date on its schedule. Two years ago the Indians carded Miami to fill a date and the Floridians thrashed the Indians . . . Last year W.&M. added little St. Bonaventure when another game fell through. Result—St. Bonnie tripped the Williamsburg club, 7-6, Saturday . . . And did you notice who starred for the Bonnies in their victory over W.&M.? Phil Collela, former Notre Dame halfback who accompanied former Irish Coach Hugh DeVore to St. Bonaventure . . .

IF DUKE DOESN'T hurry up and lose a ball game the Blue Devils will make a fibber out of Coach Wallace Wade, who in September said: "Duke no longer emphasizes winning football" . . . Nevada's smashing 65-14 triumph over Tulsa takes much of the luster off Georgetown's 13-7 win over the same Tulsa team . . . And when winless, scoreless V.P.I. held Duke to 7-0 Saturday, it must have brought a chorus of moans and groans from Maryland which lost to Duke, 13-12, but trounced V.P.I., 28-0 . . . The South's football spotlight will be focused on Shield-Watkins Stadium, Knoxville, Saturday, where unbeaten, untied North Carolina tackles a Tennessee team which has just begun to hit its stride.

TO THOSE WHO bellow that the Terrapins poured it on unnecessarily on George Washington, Maryland answers that Quarterback Vic Turyn was the only regular in the game six minutes after the third period started . . . Hampden Sydney College of Death Valley, Va., is boosting former Navy Fullback Lyn Chewning for little All-American honors . . . There'll be little to cheer about in the valley of Virginia Saturday night. Washington and Lee, bumped four times already, clashes with unbeaten Penn while V.P.I. which hasn't won or scored yet in five games, faces undefeated Army . . . Charlie Justice's 42 points top Southern Conference scorers . . . Maryland's Hubie Werner is tied for third place with 18 points.

Boon Kayoes Spar Partner

Eric Boon, British welterweight, who hopes to entertain Beau Jack at Uline Arena Thursday, today will be host to D. C. boxing writers at luncheon.

Boon, making his first start in America after 13 years of successful campaigning in England, held his first Washington workout at the Liberty A. C. yesterday and furnished a bit of excitement for onlookers by flattening Cy Redmond, a sparring partner.

Jack arrives today and will box at Liberty A. C. at 2 p. m. Both fighters were knocked out in their last starts. Jack, trying to regain his lightweight title, was stopped by Ike Williams in the sixth round of their title bout. Boon was taken out by Johnny Greco in Canada.

Perfect List Drops to 36

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Sixteen more college football teams were tied or beaten last week and today only 36 schools still can boast of perfect records.

Army and Cordell, two of the major powers, hooked up in a duel of all-conquering elevents and the Big Red fell, 20-6. In a battle among the smaller schools, Middlebury kept its streak going while knocking off Trinity (Conn.), 24-13.

Penn State, tied 14-14 by Michigan State, was the only other major outfit to drop out. The other top teams in the select set are California, Michigan, Notre Dame, North Carolina, Army, Georgia Tech, Nevada, Penn and Clemson.

Among the unbeaten and untied teams (based on four or more games) are:
SIX GAMES—California, Bul Ross, St. Thomas (Minn.), Eastern Washington College of Education, Bloomsburg (Pa.) Teachers.
FIVE GAMES—Michigan, Notre Dame, North Carolina, Army, Georgia Tech, Nevada, Adams State (Colo.), Washington U. (St. Louis), Texas Mines, West Liberty (W. Va.).
FOUR GAMES — Pennsylvania, Clemson, Virginia State College.

March Chick Loses Out By a Neck

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 25.—Harold Harter, a 4-year-old who seldom wins but pays off with big money when successful, took command early and withstood a long stretch drive to win the $3500 Smithsonian claiming handicap here today.

Carrying the colors of E. B. Townsend and ridden by Jockey Freddie Pannell, Harold Harter finished a neck in advance of H. L. Straus' March Chick, ridden by Jockey Carson Kirk. Third money in the field of a dozen went to Mrs. H. K. Haggerty's Curvaceous, a lightly regarded favorite.

It was to the tone of a $33.40 mutuel that Harold Harter scored. The track, dull from weekend rain at the start of the card, improved during the afternoon and was labeled "good" for the feature. The winner was clocked in 2:06 3/5 for the mile and a quarter.

The victory was the second of the year in a dozen tries for the son of Eternal Bull, who turned in his previous victory at Atlantic City last August at better than

Lanlast Wins Mall Purse

The Mall Purse, the day's second best offering proved a romp for Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lanlast. The 7-year-old coasted into the wire to bring joy and a $5.40 mutuel to the favorite players. Cedar Farm's Mityme was second with Joe Brown's Flareback third in a field of seven going 6 furlongs. Jockey J. Robertson booted the winner, which was clocked in 1:13 3/5 for the 6 furlongs.

Five of the seven starters met with mishaps in the day's steeplechase and Shamrock Stable's Lion Rampart was an easy winner. Mrs. C. E. Adams' Gift of Gold was second. John M. Schiff's Pere Lachaise, a French importation, was knocked out of contention when C. Mahlon Kline's Valiant bolted into the wing of the ninth jump.

Jockey A. Foot remounted Pere Lachaise and finished within the time limit for third money. In the various spills both horses and riders escaped injury. Lion Rampant paid $9, was handled by Jockey C. Peoples and was clocked in 4:13 2/5 for the about 2 miles over 13 jumps.

The daily double far outshone a parlay on the first and second winners. A parley figures $45.60 and the return $190.80 on the 10 and 9 combination. The second event went to Calumet Farm's Fine Fettle, an $8.80 shot and a hot paddock tip. Mrs. E. P. Magann's Wianno Lad was second and M Seth's Black Goods was third in the limit field of a dozen maiden juveniles Jockey N. L. Pierson rode the winning son of Chance Play the 6 furlongs in 1:15 2/5.

Mrs. E. B. Lee's Maxim Miss, making the second start of her career, won by three lengths after leading virtually all the way in the first race and returned a $10.40 mutuel while going the 6 furlongs in 1.14 4/5 under the handling of Jockey M. Basile.

Tatum Tells Touchdowners

'We Need Crowds to Schedule Big Teams'

Coach Jim Tatum of the University of Maryland yesterday painted a dim outlook for the future of college football in the Washington area unless spectator attendance greatly increases.

Tatum told the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon that big name teams will stop coming in here to play Maryland, George Washington and Georgetown if "we don't get more people in the park."

The Maryland grid mentor spoke along with John H. (Bo) Rowland, head coach of George Washington, who said his team has not been demoralized by its 0-47 loss to the Terrapins.

Tatum said he was discouraged with college football in this area and added:

"I don't see how we're going to get a schedule in here unless we can show teams a big check for their part of the game.

"I was talking to Kansas and they said they couldn't see fit to come back to Washington again. They said they could do better to stay home.

"Teams of the type you want to see play here—Alabama, Tennessee, etc.—have told us that they are waiting to see what our receipts are for the North Carolina and Duke games this year.

"The local coaches are not looking for easy games. When we get more people in the park we'll get bigger teams.

"We can't afford to bring them in on sight-seing tours."

The Touchdown Club paid honor to Jerry Spindler, Tech halfback; Dave Waldren, St. John's halfback; Ray Krause, Maryland tackle, and Vic Tyrn, Terrapin quarterback, as the outstanding local players of the past week.

And Navy Loses . . .

Penn Saved By Rule on Pass Plays

By Red Smith

New York, Oct. 25.—When the time comes to write the history of 1948 Eastern college football, it may be possible to sum it up in a single paragraph, tastefully printed in red and blue ink:

"RULE 7, SECTION 5, ARTICLE 4— During a forward pass play there shall be no interference whatsoever beyond the line of scrimmage with any player of either team who is eligible to catch the pass, except such interference as may occur when two or more eligible players make a simultaneous and bona fide effort to catch or bat the ball."

Because of Rule 7, Section 5, Article 4, the University of Pennsylvania has a winning percentage of 1000 instead of .500 after four games and retains a chance to enjoy a second consecutive season without defeat.

Because of the same paragraph in the codebook, the Admirable Admirals of tomorrow's Navy have assorted contusions, a record of five successive defeats, and a golden opportunity to collect four more.

Week before last, Penn escaped defeat by Columbia 32 seconds before the game ended because an official decided that a Columbia player had interfered with an eligible receiver on a Penn pass. Last Saturday Navy, a fifteen point outsider, was shipping Penn for the season's most stimulating form reversal, when the pass interference rule again reared its legalistic head. Again it meant the ball game.

In the sixth minute of the third period, Navy took a lead of 14 to 7 and kicked off. Penn made 5 yards on two running plays and then Francis Bagnell threw a pass which Navy's Center Randy Lawrence intercepted and ran back inside Navy's 30-yard line.

The Midshipmen had the Penns in slightly disorderly retreat at this point, and you wouldn't have given much for the home guard's chances of forestalling another Navy touchdown. However, officials decided there had been interference by Navy, and Penn got first down on its 37. The next play was a long, wild pass, far out of everyone's reach, which became good for another gain of 18 yards when officials again saw interference.

Penn didn't score on that advance but the game had been turned upside down. Now Penn took the offensive, made two touchdowns, and Navy never got another chance.

This witness didn't detect malfeasance on the first pass, but the second transgression was plainly seen and flagrantly foolish, for the ball was nowhere in the neighborhood of the foul.

St. Bonaventure Star Suspended

Olean, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—The athletics director of St. Bonaventure College tonight suspended John Collins, punting star of its unbeaten football squad, from all future intercollegiate competition.

The Rev. Silas D. Rooney, O. F. M., said his action "was brought about when Collins admitted to playing baseball with the Schenectady professional baseball team during the summer of 1948 after an outside query has instigated an investigation."

'Skins Back From Green Bay Game With 'Lucky' Football

soon as I saw a few plays, so I took it easy before Green Bay. The kids were fresh and eager. Once they found out they could flatten the Packers there was no stopping them."

Edwards ran down a list of other items contributing to the triumph that earned sole possession of second place in the eastern division, National Football League.

There was Dan Sandifer's 96-yard jaunt with the opening kickoff, rocking the proud Packers on their heels; brilliant ball carrying by Tom Farmer, Dick Todd, Ed Quick and Dick Poillon; Tommy Mont's running of the T-formation while Sammy Baugh rested; End Hal Crisler's surprise performance as safety man; Baugh's own choice of plays, etc.

"The pressure is off Redskin coaches for the time being," sighed Edwards, "now all we have to do is avoid too much of a letdown for the next three 'easy' games."

The Boston Yankees, after a free-scoring loss to the champion Chicago Cardinals, come to Griffith Stadium this weekend. Next week the same Yanks, cellar dwellers in the East, will be met in Boston, and there follows a home date with the winless Detroit Lions . . . Halfback Bob Nussbaumer, flown back from Milwaukee with a pulled muscle in his side, may miss this week's game, but on the cheerful side is news that Halfback Eddie Saenz, who broke his leg in fall practice, will start running again today . . . Tackle Weldon Edwards also reports from Wilmington, replacing Ed Stacco.

Guard Bill Gray was sitting on the bench when the Milwaukee public address system announced: "They're carrying Bill Gray away in that ambulance." . . . It wasn't funny, though, because the victim was Bob Nussbaumer . . . Those weren't kind words passing between the Packer's Coach Curly Lambeau and Quarterback Jack Jacobs for all the people to hear . . . On the subject of Sandifer and long runs: The good-looking rookie was congratulated on the West Coast after he'd run for touchdowns the first two times he touched the ball as a Redskin. . . . "Quite a record," somebody said . . . Sandifer drawled: "The part that I ain't been tackled yet."

The Federal Diary

Legion Convention Acts on Resolutions Affecting U. S. Service

The American Legion, at its Miami convention, took action on a score of resolutions which would affect the Federal service and its employes. Among them were:

1. That either the President or the Congress declare World War II to be officially ended, with a provision which would deny preference after such a date to most of those who make up the peacetime military service after that date.

This action is important. Young men who are being drafted are now entitled to 5 points preference for Federal jobs and 10 points if they become disabled. The Legion resolution would knock out the 5 points for peacetime veterans. The 10 points for disabled people would be continued. Of course, draftees from the Federal service would be guaranteed reemployment rights.

2. Went on record as being "unalterably opposed" to the Langer bill, which would wipe out preference for some veterans during a reduction in force. The original Langer bill would have limited this lay-off preference to veterans with less than 10 years of service.

3. That military people be put in jobs ordinarily filled by civilian Civil Service personnel only in such cases as may be necessitated by sound military objectives.

4. That a study be made of the advisability of granting preference to veterans in making promotions.

5. That the Veterans Service of the Civil Service Commission be expanded to provide better services to veterans, including counseling and aptitude tests, and,

6. That Arthur S. Flemming, the former GOP member of the Civil Service Commission, be presented with a "national citation" for his outstanding work in safeguarding preferences to veterans.

The Legion did not take a clear-cut stand on the Senate-approved bill which would require veterans to make a passing mark on Civil Service tests before preference points were added. This measure was referred to the group's National Economic Commission. Referred to the same commission was a measure which would require the Government to notify a veteran in writing when he's certified to an agency for a job or when he's passed over for a nonveteran.

The convention refused to demand the ouster of the three Railroad Retirement Board members and five other board officials on charges of maltreatment of veterans. Instead, it ordered its Preference Committee to carefully follow the matter.

It's not supposed to be known, but the Legion's employe actions were awaited with great interest by the personnel subcommittee of the Hoover Commission. In its tentative report, the subcommittee is reported to have recommended that veterans be required to get a passing mark before preference points can be added, and that a system be set up in Civil Service to counsel and to give aptitude tests to veterans.

GOSSIP: There's plenty of it in Federal agencies as the election draws near. At the European Recovery Administration there is a report that Deputy Administrator Howard Bruce will step out around the end of this year.

An interesting bit of speculation involves Labor Secretary Maurice Tobin and a Massachusetts politician is responsible for it. This is the story:

That Dewey, if elected, will offer Tobin the Democratic seat on the Civil Service Commission, or some other Federal job he could accept with good grace. Behind the campaign to keep Tobin here are several Massachusetts Republican bigwigs who would feel more comfortable if the Labor Secretary remain out of State politics.

EXAMS: Civil Service has exams open for lithographic jobs at starting salaries ranging from $2250 to $4035, and for junior scientist to fill P-1 jobs as physcists, mathematicians and metallurgists . . . Civil Service yesterday sent out a plea for qualified persons to accept jobs on the Washington police force. Get details at Civil Service . . . Two new tests will be announced soon by Civil Service. They will be for engineering, statistical and cartographic draftsman ($2152 to $3727) and for pharmacologist ($3727 to $10,330) to fill openings here in the Federal Security Agency.

DOWN: For the first time in nearly a year, Federal employment in this city showed a decrease last month. At the beginning of this month, Civil Service counted 208,000 employes here in the executive branch, a reduction of only 200 compared with the previous month. Over the entire country, employment also was at a virtual standstill—an increase of 3100 for the month.

MARITIME: This commission recently received one of its rare complimentary letters from a member of Congress. Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) was the author. He congratulated the commission on its recent reorganization. Incidentally, Maritime is one of the few agencies with no serious loyalty case among its employes.

RATINGS: Yesterday's mail had a dozen letters from Federal workers who argued for the present efficiency rating system or else objected to the plan of Frances Perkins to simplify the system. I'll present that point of view here in a day or so.

Judge Laws Asks Return To Old-Time Patriotism

Natives' Society Told Individuals' Rights Come After Nation's Welfare

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of United States District Court, last night urged Washingtonians to lead a revival of "old-fashioned American patriotism," which, he said, subordinates the individual rights to the national welfare.

Speaking at a meeting of more than 50 members of the District Society of Natives at the Mayflower Hotel, Judge Laws commended the society's new president, James C. Toomey, for reiterating the society's patriotic aims, then added:

"There is another part of a citizen's function in this country, other than emphasizing at all times his individual rights. Earlier Americans were not thinking solely of their rights, but were working for the welfare of the Nation as a whole. They often subordinated their rights to build the Nation."

Toomey announced the Society will sponsor a series of weekly radio forums to be broadcast Thursdays at 10:30 p. m. on radio station WMAL. The series will start November 4, with a panel of Washington civic and business leaders, headed by District Commissioner John R. Young.

John Yard In Sensitive Renditions

By Paul Hume

John Yard, baritone, and Mildred Gardner, pianist, gave a sensitive evening of songs last night in the Phillips Gallery.

Yard has given Washington some of its outstanding singing in recent years. Last night was no exception to past accounts. He is a musician-singer, selective in what he presents, scrupulous in its delivery, and artistic at every moment.

Familiar names such as Strauss, Tschaikowsky and Ravel, mixed with lesser known Castelnuovo-Tedesco, Santoliquido, Fleming and more. But at every point the music was of keen interest and worth. To marry three piano preludes of Chopin and three poems of Petrarch is to attempt an alliance of geniuses which might not succeed. That Castelnuovo-Tedesco turns out eloquent songs by this means is a mark of his own awareness of the poetry in both.

Drama and sweet memories were enkindled in gentle songs of Max Reger, Othmar Schoeck and Mahler. We would have preferred the aria from "Eugen Onegin" in English to the German translation from the Russian, but it was beautifully sung. Most successful in mood and vocalism were the French and American items of the program. Here, a variety of motion which had been lacking earlier in the evening came into happy prominence. And the rather too-subdued mood of the Italian and German lyrics gave way to one of brighter hues.

For one mild plaint against Ward's fine work is his tendency to be a little more restrained than need be. It is rare that one can make such a comment but in this case it is true. It lies both in selection and in the presentation. But with his gift for illuminating a song's true character, Yard might well sing with broader abandon.

Miss Gardner's happiest moments came in the French group where her style seemed at one with the writing. It was a concert of subtle but concrete rewards for all who listened, and assuredly for the artists as well.

7% Hike Set For McLean Gardens Rent

Examiner Denies Any Boost for Dormitory Accommodations

A rent increase of nearly 7 per cent for apartment units of McLean Gardens was recommended yesterday by Examiner Denis K. Lane, who at the same time denied any boost for dormitory accommodations at the project.

Fairmac Corp., owners of the 2020-unit Wisconsin ave. nw., development, had sought a 10 per cent increase for apartments and a flat $5 rental hike for the dormitories. The total annual increase resulting from the decision amounts to $45,117, compared with $65,595 sought for the apartments by the corporation.

The examiner's recommendation takes effect on November 5 unless an appeal is filed by the tenants.

In awarding the apartment increase, Lane said it was justified by substantial increase in expenses and costs to the owners in taxes, repairs and utilities costs.

Rent Hike Studied For Apartment

A proposal to raise rents at the Wyoming Apartments, 2022 Columbia rd. nw., by 8 per cent was taken under advisement yesterday by the District Rent Control Administration.

Examiner Dennis K. Lane heard the petition for the increase, which was presented by John L. Barr, jr., agent for the apartment. Under the request, rents on the smallest unit, of two rooms, would go up from $32.50 to $35, while rents on the largest of the units would increase from $132.50 for six rooms and two baths to $143. There are 103 units in the apartment development.

Civic Groups Urged to Delay Action on Hospital Bond Issue

An appeal for all Silver Spring civic groups to withhold any action on the proposed million-dollar bond issue for the erection of a hospital until the legislative bill is drafted, was made last night by Ralph D. Boyd, president of the Silver Spring Hospital Association.

Boyd spoke to delegates of the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring at a meeting held in the Liquor Control Board Building. He said he was to meet with Montgomery County Delegates to the General Assembly on the proposed bill later in the night.

Recommendations for the establishment of traffic lights at Sligo and Georgia aves., Wayne and Georgia aves., Burlington dr. and 13th st., Fenton st. and Colesville rd. have been made to the State Roads Commission by a traffic survey committee of the commission, Charles Graham, the delegate from Silver Spring Board of Trade, reported.

Donald Hanley, secretary of the Silver Spring Garden Club, urged support of proposed beautification of the Silver Spring area, including landscaping of the traffic islands in the center of the newly constructed section of Georgia ave. between Colesville rd. and the viaduct.

Pre-School Agers Pose Va. Problem

Overcrowding Due In Arlington Within Few Years Unless Classrooms Are Built

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Overcrowding in 19 of Arlington's 24 elementary schools will be serious enough within the next few years to "completely overwhelm" present facilities, unless new classrooms are built.

That was the warning yesterday of Arlington School Consultant Dr. Edvard J. Braun, who spotlighted districts in which the heavy school population poses the biggest space problem.

The county school board is asking voters to approve a $4,750,000 bond issue for school construction at the polls next Tuesday.

Pre-School Population Cited

But pre-school children number more than 17,800 in the area surrounding the 24 schools.

In two schools—Pickett Homes and Glencarlyn—there are roughly six times as many pre-schoolers as there are students currently in elementary grades.

Pickett has 95 present students, with 585 pre-sechoolers in the area. Glencarlyn now has 38, with 224 pre-school children ready to enter in the next few years.

In the booming Fairlington area, the present elementary school has 767 on the rolls, 2693 pre-school youngsters. A new school to be built in the area this year should relieve the situation, school officials believe.

Figures on Other Schools

Barcroft: 298 this year, 596 pre-school; Woodmont, 110 now, 220 pre-school; Kate Waller Barrett, 457 and 1103; Patrick Henry, 647 and 1698; Walter Reed, 582 and 1469; Nellie Custis, 340 and 873; Cherrydale, 277 and 575;

Henry Clay, 386 and 708; Hume, 148 and 641; Stonewall Jackson, 465 and 842; Robert E. Lee, 193 and 306; James Madison, 97 and 148; John Marshall, 406 and 481; Matthew Maury, 246 and 583; James Monroe, 390 and 728; Thomas Nelson Page, 200 and 281; Peyton Randolph, 286 and 776; Shirley Homes, 221 and 951; Charles Stewart, 170 and 241; Woodrow Wilson, 135 and 649, and Woodlawn, 246 and 505.

Teachers Accused on Charter Plan

A charge that Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School teachers yesterday circulated pro-charter literature among students was made last night by anti-charterites.

County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter, a charter opponent, could not be reached but was reported planning an investigation. His son, Wesley I., jr a tenth-grade student at the school, however, said he and other students were handed sample ballots by their home-room teachers, showing how to vote "yes" for the charter on November 2.

Samual E. Bogley, real estate man and head of the speakers Bureau to Defeat Charter, said he would file formal objection with bureau to defeat charter, said he school children in efforts to overthrow the existing county government."

County voters will decide next Tuesday on replacing the present five-man Board of County Commissioners and a county supervisor with a seven-man county council and a county manager.

School Superintendent Edwin W. Broome said he had no reports on the alleged action of the teachers, but would look into the matter.

5 Children Win Concert Tickets In Essay Contest

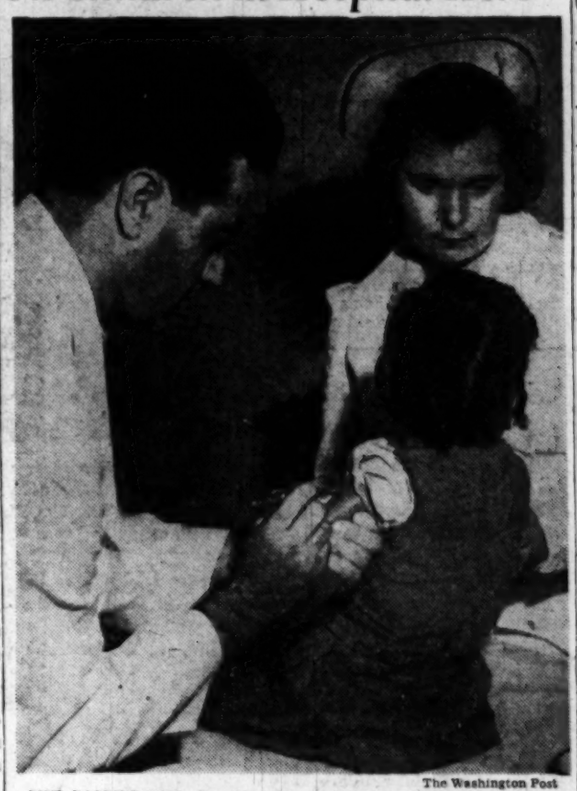
Drum-playing youngsters who bring their drums along will be admitted free, according to Director Lanning, and asked to take part in a special march rendition during the program.

Anti-Pneumonia Serum Tested On Children in Hospital Here



The Washington Post

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Anti-pneumonia serum is being given to youngsters at Children's Hospital here to test the serum's worth for children of pre-school age, it was learned yesterday.

The drug, pneumococcus polysaccharides, already has been mass-tested among soldiers and old-age groups with highly satisfactory results, according to sponsors of the project.

Inoculation of the first group of 20 youngsters, between 2 and 4, was begun at the Well Baby Clinic of Children's Hospital on September 23; another 20 were given the one-shot injections on September 30, and by yesterday the total number innoculated had reached 60.

Additional groups will be immunized weekly at the clinic until the goal of 100 is reached, said Dr. Dorothy S. Jaeger-Lee, medical director of the clinic. In all cases, she said, consent of the parents is first obtained.

The serum is declared effective not only against pneumonia but in all other pneumococcus infections, including some types of sore throat and ear abscesses. Though not a complete guarantee against the infections, the serum is credited with reducing their severity when they do occur.

For comparison purposes, records of the 100 children immunized will be compared with health records of a "control group" of an equal number of youngsters at the clinic who will not be given the injections, Dr. Jaeger-Lee said. The test period is one year, nominal effect period of the drug.

The project is sponsored by the Child Welfare Society, the Red Feather agency which operates the clinic. Another project sponsored by the society is testing the value of glutamic acid in the diet to aid mentally-retarded children. The latter was begun last December, but will take several months more before even preliminary results can be compiled, it was said.

The U. S. Army initially tested pneumococcus polysaccharides serum on 8500 soldiers in comparative tests against a control group of another 8500 soldiers not inoculated. Results of those tests were described as "highly satisfactory," said Dr. Jaeger Lee.

Even more specific results, she said, were obtained from a six-year study among elderly persons. In these tests, 5750 men and women were inoculated with the serum and results obtained were compared with health records of an uninoculated group of 5153 adults.

Pneumonia infections among the immunized totaled 30.3 per 1000 persons to a rate of 145.5 pneumonia infections per 1000 persons in the untreated group, said Dr. Jaeger-Lee.

Though children are generally more resistant to pneumonia than adults, said the medical directors, the tests at Children's Hospital will be of further interest because most of the youngsters come from crowded-living areas where the rate of respiratory infections runs high.

Laborer Held On Morals Charge Here

A 58-year-old laborer yesterday was held under $10,000 bond for grand jury action on a sodomy charge.

He is Michael Thork, of 4518 Canal rd. nw., who told police he is a night engineer for a local apartment house.

Police said he was arrested Saturday evening, when a passerby saw a small girl enter Thork's shack, became alarmed and called police. They found the girl with Thork, they said. She told them of other children, who had visited the shack during the past few months, according to police.

Most of the children were around 10 and 11 years old. Thork enticed them with money, police said. He admitted that he had served a sentence for statutory rape in Pennsylvania, according to police.

Sentence Nov. 3

Taxi Driver Convicted in Man's Death

Ernest F. Lee, 24, of 4521 Fairfield dr., Bethesda, was convicted in Municipal Court yesterday of negligent homicide in the traffic death of Arno O. Teumer, 62, of 2831 27th st. nw.

Lee, a cab driver, was en route to Virginia when the accident occurred March 7 at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. Teumer was a pedestrian.

According to testimony, Lee had been drinking and after the accident stopped, looked at the injured man and then drove away without reporting to police.

Teumer suffered a skull fracture. He died a little more than two months after the accident.

Shortly before Teumer's death, Judge Nadine L. Gallagher fined Lee a total of $75 on charges of leaving after colliding and failing to give full time and attention. Subsequently, a coroner's jury held Lee on the negligent homicide charge.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn set sentencing for November 3.

202 More Area Polio Cases Than at Same Time Last Year

Two new polio cases were reported by Washington hospitals yesterday, bringing the total so far this year for Greater Washington to 230. At this time last year, only 28 cases had been reported.

Of the new cases, one, a 1-year-old girl living in the 3700 block of Kanawha st. nw., is under treatment at Children's Hospital, while a 21-year-old youth from the 100 block of 53d st. se. is being treated at Gallinger Hospital.

The total of District cases now stands at 119, as compared with 19 at this time last year.

In Virginia, the State Department of Health reported two new cases over the week end, bringing the 1948 polio total to 510.

Because of the heavy outbreak of poliomyletis this year, an all-day session will be held today at the Statler Hotel to discuss plans for the campaign of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and March of Dimes.

Representatives of the District and five States will start the session at 9:30 a. m. to map plans for a local campaign which will start January 14 and last through January 31. Edgar Morris is District campaign chairman.

At a preliminary session held yesterday, Warren D. Coss, national fund raising director for the March of Dimes, said best available medical care is being given every case of polio in this section of the country. He added that local chapters whose funds are exhausted will receive whatever financial assistance is necessary to carry them through the present epidemic period.

Early Trial On Patterson Will Asked By Executors

Court Is Asked To Start Case on Dec. 6, or as Soon After as Possible

Executors of the contested will of Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, late owner of the Washington Times-Herald, yesterday took formal action to get an early trial date.

A motion filed in District Court by attorneys for Frank C. Waldrop, editor in chief of the Times-Herald, William C. Shelton, general manager, and Joseph Brooks, New York broker, asks the court to begin trial over the will on December 6, or as soon after that as possible.

The $16,586,571 will is being challenged by Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, on grounds of fraud, coercion, duress and the "unsound mind" of her mother.

Tentative Date Set

At a hearing on October 14, District Court Judge James W. Morris had set a tentative date of November 4 for trial, but the final date must allow for notifying interested parties and for a prescribed four-week period of publication. The early tentative date was set over objections of Harold A. Kertz, an attorney for Mrs. Gizycka, who said more time was needed to "find additional evidence."

The executors charge in the motion that if Mrs. Gizycka's "grave charges" were made at a time when she "was not prepared to proceed, they were particularly reckless."

The motion states that Mrs. Gizycka prevented the quickest means of administering the estate by bringing action before the will was admitted to probate, thus choosing to "impose a large burden of administration, increase the cost tremendously, and cause extreme hardship to various beneficiaries under the will."

Other Contentions

Also cited in the motion is "extreme hardship" to various legatees, due to the fact that annuities left them by Mrs. Patterson cannot be resumed until the will contest is settled.

"Despite empty gestures, consisting principally of a press release," the executors assert, Mrs. Gizycka "has failed to take the steps necessary under the law to alleviate this situation."

(The words "press release" apparently refer to a statement by Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys that she has been sending small payments to some of hed mother's beneficiaries, and that she had proposed to have payments made out of her mother's estate regardless of the court fight over the will.)

The executors also contend the trial should be speeded because of the limitation of power of the Riggs National Bank, which is administering the estate as collector, over non-District property and over the Times-Herald property.

Woman Driver Puts 5 Cars in Drydock

Never underestimate the power of a woman—especially if she's learning to drive.

Last week, a feminine driver trainee applied her dainty foot with great force to the brake pedal of a dual-control, driver-training car belonging to the American Automobile Association. Result: All five of the AAA's dual-control cars have been parked ever since.

Seems the woman, out learning to drive by doing it, suddenly slammed on the brake so hard it locked. On her right, the instructor's brake locked too. He cut the switch and the car came to an abrupt halt, injuring nobody.

Since then, a spokesman said, the AAA has been checking all its dual-control cars from stem to stern.

They'll be back on full schedule Wednesday, he said, which, he added, also is the time the woman driver of this story reports for her next lesson.

Firemen from three Prince Georges County companies battled the fire for more than three hours, but were unable to save the vacant structure, which occupied part of a 130-acre site at 31st and Nicholson sts. Only the four walls were left standing when the flames finally were extinguished around 7 a. m.

The building was used as a school by the Sisters of Providence for about 20 years, but was purchased by the Government in 1942 for war use. After plans for Federal use were abandoned, the property was purchased in 1946 by the Perry Development Corp.

Ex-Minister Vambery Dies In N. Y. Exile

Rustem Vambery, 77, who called himself an "old fighter for justice" when he resigned last May as Hungarian minister to the United States out of protest against Communist influence in his country, died Sunday night in New York City.

Mr. Vambery

A resident of this country for 10 years prior to his resignation, Vambery succeeded Aladar Szegedy-Mazak as minister from Hungary. He was thus the second officer to hold that post following the Nazi occupation of Hungary.

An authoritative criminilogist, he was professor of criminal law at the University of Budapest for 22 years. He taught the same subject at the New School for Social Research in New York after fleeing the Nazis in Hungary in 1938.

He was appointed minister in July, 1947, by the same government he denounced in resigning. He said he had accepted the post solely in hope of "improving the deteriorated relations between Hungary and the United States."

"I regret to say," he remarked at the time of his resignation, "that my hopes have not come true."

"I could not help feeling grieved about some recent events in Hungary, as for example the enforced merger of the Social Democrat and Communist Parties.

"Nor could I agree, as an old fighter for justice, with the new law which allows judges to be transferred or pensioned for political reasons."

During his residence in Washington, Mr. Vambery lived at the Wardman Park Hotel. In World War II he served as an unofficial advisor to the State Department, the Office of Strategic Services and the British Information Services on Hungarian problems.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Close friendships between boys and girls are likely to develop as they move into the early teens. "Boy friends" and "girl friends" should be expected by parents, and even welcomed. All of us want our youngsters to have a happy family life when they grow up. One way to assure this is through a number of close friendships that give them opportunities to know those of the opposite sex well.

Apparently, it seems funny to many parents when they see that their youngsters like to spend a good deal of time with a "boy friend" or a "girl friend." At any rate, there is often a good deal of rather heavy-handed humor, which is not appreciated by the youngsters and which often makes them self-conscious.

It is far better to put the "wisecracks" aside and show a quiet interest in the youngster's friends. Our young people are growing up and we should be happy to see that they are growing normally. And to have special friends of the opposite sex is very normal.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Self-Styled Aspiring Writer Without a Job Begins to Doubt That Wife's Intelligence Equals His, Since She Wanly Twits His Pose

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife and I are aspiring writers, and she spends 12 to 14 hours a week, aside from her job as a factory worker, in study and practice of writing technique.

I prefer to postpone serious efforts at authorship until I can give myself wholeheartedly to the task, without money worries, but Lucy says she wishes to make the most of the time she has now, and earn some extra money, if possible, with which to buy a home and have her children with us.

We were married two years ago, have a baby 11 months old, and Lucy's three children by a former marriage are still boarding in the country. She pays for their upkeep, buys their clothes and visits them faithfully every week. I pay rent for the room where we live, when I have the necessary funds, and buy our food; but lately there has been a dearth of work for me and I've had to limit my purchases to occasional toys for our baby.

The problem is our endless quarrels, many times about money, but other times about Lucy's unsmiling jibes at my various abilities, remarks usually made after we return from seeing her children. She spends Saturdays and Sundays doing endless chores and becomes very tired, which she says is the reason for her slighting remarks; but that excuse seems artificial to me.

Here Is Typical Battle of Words

WHEN WE MARRIED, I rated Lucy's intelligence nearly the equal of my own, but our quarrels raise doubts in my mind, which she is quick to sense, and the result is more controversy.

For example, she chose to ignore ce tain discursive questions of mine. When I insisted upon knowing why, she said the answers should be self-evident to a child. I countered with three good reasons for answering anyway: 1. Maybe I honestly didn't know. 2. Perhaps I wished to find if she knew. 3. As a courtesy, if she loved me and valued rapport.

Whereupon she said to answer for the first reason would insult my intelligence; to answer for the second reason would insult her intelligence; and as for the third reason, she dismissed it with a shrug and a sneer.

I am a realist, but more than that, I am an idealist; and above all I am interested in lifting Lucy's attitude toward life up to a par with mine. I believe that is the only way to make a true marriage, a home, a harmonious family. Lucy freely admits she is more of a materialist than I, but she will not try to better herself and dismisses my higher ideals with a shrug. How can I make her see and overcome her mistake? Perhaps you can help me. C. P.

Vexatious Poseur, Too Lazy to Earn

DEAR C. P.: Here is your letter, cut to one-third its original length, and reorganized throughout to pull your squawk together. What a tiresome parasitical poseur and windbag you are. The way to help Lucy is to hush your mouth, find paid employment and provide a home for her, where the children can be together.

There is no dearth of work for you, just dearth of willingness to seek or accept such forms of labor as you could handle. I suppose you're not skilled at anything, because too lazy thus far to become an apprentice and learn. As for your various abilities, whatever they are, they're none too big for the humblest task that may be found.

The gifted individual, temporarily sidetracked from his destiny, dignifies and illuminates any job at hand, with the quality of his special talent and creative interest. His opposite number, the humbug straining for effect, struggles to annex a respected professional label; and this you are doing in calling yourself "an aspiring writer."

So cut the comedy. Quit the pretense. You're not superior to Lucy in any respect. She runs rings around you in realism, salty logic and functional idealism, and no wonder her tolerance veers toward contempt, as she turns wearily back from melancholy weekend pilgrimages to the homeless children, listening to your foolish defensive gabble, which issues from your guilty knowledge that you're doing nothing to help her, really. Russian Aims Keep U. S. Taxes, Spending High, Federation Told

"JOSEF STALIN will have more influence on United States economy than the next President," James W. Douthat, Washington editor, National Association of Manufacturers News, told members of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday at the organization's first fall meeting held in the Hamilton Hotel.

"Stalin's policies will affect the amount of money we spend for defense, the amount we pay for taxes," explained Douthat, "and will determine how high prices will be, and the expansion of industry."

What with the growing movement to arm western Europe and 11 billion dollars appropriated for defense and a possible increase to 15 or 20 billions next year, there's no chance at all for any appreciable reduction of taxes, the national debt or spending, according to Douthat. He also pointed out that possibly one half billion will be appropriated for the Latin-American countries plus aid to China, Greece and Turkey.

"All hinges on whether or not there will be war with Russia," he declared, "but only Stalin knows the answer. If any war is started it will be initiated by the men in the Kremlin, not by the United States."

Referring to high prices and cost of living, Douthat attributed soaring prices to (1) three times as much money in United States now than in 1939; (2) three rounds of wage increases with a fourth in the offing on demands from the railroads and the AFL; (3) high taxes and "wasteful Government spending;" (4) shortages caused by war.

Defends Industry

Douthat said that some erroneously blame high prices on industry's excessive profits. "Normally 20 per cent of industry's profits are returned each year into improvements and plant expansions but manufacturers were prevented from doing so during the war," he explained. "As a result industry is 185 billion short of what should be reinvested to bring it up to efficiency."

He called upon the federation members to study the Hoover Commission's report to reorganize the Government for greater efficiency when it appears in January, and if they find it to their liking to encourage Congress to accept it.

Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, public relations department chairman, introduced the speaker.

Morning Session

At the morning session Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, federation bond chairman, reported that the various D. C. clubs in the federation had sold $107,974.25 of savings bonds from September, 1947, to October, 1948.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, chairman of the legislation department, reported that Miss Cornelia Hall of her committee had represented the federation at a recent hearing before the District Commissioners to reiterate the organization's indorsement of a 2 per cent sales tax and opposition to an increase in real estate taxes. Mrs. Harvey said that the District sales tax would bring in 13 million dollars per annum which is needed for local use.

Due to lack of funds, federation members voted to drop the organization's monthly magazine, The District Clubwoman, which has been edited ably since its inception by Mrs. Edgar Merritt. A resolution of thanks to Mrs. Merritt for her work was indorsed unanimously.

Mrs. J. Frank Mulkern led a panel discussion on the need for extension and unification in the club world, based on the General Federation's extension program. Participating in the discussion were Mrs. Archie T. Reid, Mrs. Harry De Lung and Mrs. Wallace S. Brothers.

Mrs. Edward C. Magdeberger, federation president, presided.

WCTU Opens Fall Convention

The D. C. Women's Christian Temperance Union opened its two-day fall convention yesterday at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, 13th and Fairmont sts. nw.

Walter A. Ralls, who represents WCTU as a public school instructor in alcohol education, spoke to members on "A New Look for the WCTU" following the opening day banquet.

The WCTU should restate the old values in new terms so that the organization would have more appeal to the younger audience, Mr. Ralls told club members. Instead of arguing the problem from an academic standpoint, Mr. Ralls said, the WCTU should institute a strong aggressive system of education as to what physiological and psychological elements are involved.

"The teen-ager needs an alive presentation of what liquor drinking really involves," Mr. Ralls said. "He doesn't know, generally speaking, and it is time someone told him."

The afternoon sessions yesterday included reports of officers and committees and an address by Mrs. Amy W. Weech, honorary president of the Virginia WCTU.

Mrs. Weech told club members of the two Oregon heifers, "ambassadors of temperance and peace," sent to the WCTU Rescue Home in Tokyo. The original two, dubbed "Temperance" and "Teetotaler," were increased to three when "Purity" was born aboard ship.

Colorful Program Planned for Horse Show

All boxes have been subscribed for the sixtieth series of performances of the National Horse Show which, opening at Madison Square Garden on election day, November 2, will usher in New York's winter social season.

The Horse Show will be on its traditional schedule of eight days. Featured on the program will be international military jumping contests between the teams of Canada, France and Mexico at each evening performance and the Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, Sunday and Monday matinees.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police will present their exciting and colorful musical ride at each evening and matinee show. This year interest in the juvenile events has increased so that in addition to the traditional Saturday matinee, part of Sunday afternoon will be given over to the young riders.

The National Horse Show equitation championship on the flat will be judged Saturday afternoon and the Maclay Cup championship over the jumps on Sunday.

Federation to Meet

The thirty-second semiannual meeting of Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs will take place at 10 a. m. today at the First Methodist Church, 5300 Baltimore blvd., Hyattsville, Md.

Rains One Day a Year

Sunny Phoenix Builds Its Prosperity on Tourists, Cattle and Orange Groves

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 25.—In the Valley of the Sun, Phoenix, Arizona's capital, sprawls neatly across some 7250 acres. It's a pleasant city, filled with expensively plate-glass-fronted clothing shops; hardware stores overflowing with popup toasters and such gimmicks, rare back East, cheek to jowled with slots in the wall displaying Indian jewelry, pottery, rugs and an interesting variety of mildly naughty postcards. The snappiest hotel advertises 600 tons of air-conditioning equipment and a drive-in motor lobby. The local football stadium is called "The Salad Bowl" because tons of lettuce are grown in the neighborhood.

The climate is elegant and the sun shines determinedly 364 days a year. Since rainfall averages only 2 inches in 12 months, sewers to carry off rainwater are nonexistent. Last week the much-touted 365th day occurred and the city was flooded when the .65 of an inch fell in six minutes—the biggest, fiercest rainfall on record.

This freak of nature is still chief conversation topic among the metropolitan area's 200,000 locals who are called, logically enough, Phoenicians.

Tourist Prosperity

SOME of the capital's prosperity is derived from tourists, much from cattle and agricultural efforts in the surrounding valley. The better heeled tourists descend in winter mobs on such plush resorts as The Arizona Biltmore, Camelback, Paradise and Jokake Inns. Elizabeth Arden runs a dreamy desert hideaway near the capital where a dozen or so ladies at a time can undergo super-luxurious overhauling.

The valley around Phoenix, efficiently irrigated, is lush with orchards—orange, lemon, grapefruit, dates.

Some of the orange orchards are owned by a company whose trade-marked name is always associated with California produce. Fields of lettuce, spinach and unidentifiable legumes fan out to touch the beautifully jagged rim of mountains.

Another highway into Phoenix bisects acres of penned cattle, the worlds largest stockyards owned by an up-and-coming gent named Tovrea. Thirty-five miles from the capital is Williams Field Air Force Base, an independent desert entity, where our jet pilots are trained.

In Twentieth Century Club Talk

Dr. Buschmeyer Praises European Courage, Initiative

The Rev. Fred S. Buschmeyer, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, yesterday excoriated Americans for carelessly remarking, "Why don't the Europeans go to work?", and at the same time praised the Europeans for their courage and initiative. He spoke before the International Outlook Section of the Twentieth Century Club at a luncheon meeting held in the Y.W.C.A.

"If Americans had one tenth the energy of Europeans we wouldn't have disunity in this country," he declared.

Referring to a recent visit in Germany, he said that currency reform in that country was greatly needed and that since it had been instituted the people have returned to work with renewed vigor. "The Germans believe in the mark, so they are going back to work," explained the Rev. Buschmeyer. "There's no man's signature on the new currency but the people have faith in it."

He recalled that in Frankfurt, he was amazed when a porter refused cigarettes and asked to be paid in marks.

Human Needs Great

"Human needs in Europe now are greater than three years ago," he insisted. "With all the devastation in Germany, it would take 25 years to rebuild one city according to our standards even if all personnel and materials were available."

Dr. Buschmeyer said that he had revisited displaced persons camps in Europe and had found great improvement. "But the improvement is not due to the United States' taking its share of DPs but rather to the labor problems of the Benelux countries plus Australia and New Zealand," he averred. "Nearly all the young people have gone from the DP camps into resettlement camps. But there's still some cream of the crop left.

"For example," he continued, "there are still 2500 physicians in the DP camps, of which only 100 have been screened and given refresher courses."

Older People's Plight

"Real heart of the DP problem is taking care of the older people," said Dr. Buschmeyer. "The children's aspect of the story has been oversold, relatively speaking, and the elderly people left behind unwanted. Many of the older people could contribute needed talents in this and other countries."

The speaker said that the present DP law should be liberalized by Congress; otherwise it will be 1950 before the allotted quota could be brought into the United States, since the man had to be fitted to the job before he was allowed to enter."

Dr. Buschmeyer told of the difficulty in obtaining world understanding, citing the recent World Council of Church Assembly which he attended in Amsterdam. "There was the problem of different languages, dress, customs and traditions to be understood before we could reach an understanding. After a few days we began to iron out our differences and misunderstanding and united on a common aim," he explained. "The same must be done in world problems."

Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, jr., program chairman, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Robert S. Townsend, club president, presided.

GOP Rally Speakers

Mrs. Thad Brown, national Republican committeewoman for the District of Columbia, and Mrs. E. Pauline Myers, member speakers' bureau, Republican National Committee, will be principal speakers at a mass rally tonight at 8 o'clock at Asbury Methodist Church, 11th and K sts. nw. The program is being sponsored by Virginia White Speel Women's Republican Club.

About Restoring Finish to Dresser

A plastic case was left on my bleached mahogany dresser during the summer, stuck to it, and left a dull, pock-marked area. What can be done to restore the dresser's finish. J. N.

Get some powdered pumice stone and a light oil, such as linseed, at a drug or paint store. Dip a soft cloth in the oil, then in the powdered pumice and rub the spot with the grain of the wood. You should be able to smooth the damaged area considerably in this way. If this doesn't improve it sufficiently, refinishing is about the only answer to the problem.

Where in Washington or the surrounding area could I buy an ice skating skirt? I have tried all the department stores and sport shops but have been unsuccessful in finding them.
Daily Reader

At least two local stores sell skating skirts, but have only one or two in stock at the present time. They say that around Christmas time their supply is usually at its peak as many people give them as gifts. Telephone numbers of the stores are National 7733 and Emerson 7700. Have you thought of making one? It isn't a difficult job, and many local skaters make their own.

Sometime ago, you mentioned in your column the address of a firm which sells unusual used articles on commission. Would you publish this information again? Also, can you tell me if the woman's exchange type of shop at 1631 Wisconsin ave. is still in business? I have been unable to contact them by telephone. J. C. K.

The telephone number for the shop on K st. that sells unusual used articles is Sterling 5191. I do not know the present status of the Wisconsin ave. shop. We have been unable to get the telephone to answer, too. Perhaps some reader can enlighten us.

Geography Lesson Goes From Bad to Verse

Rhymster George A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw. sent me digging through my atlas with the poem below. I think I came up with the right answer, but I'm not sure.

If you can solve the riddle, turn to the last item in today's column and see if we agree. Here it is:

I started from my own home State
And kept on driving West.
I drove my very best.

Two States I crossed along the way
Then, much to my surprise,
The boundary of my own home State
Was right before my eyes.

Where was I?

LONG NYLONS: SHORT BEER

Gladys R. Keller of 1411 Chapin st. nw. took the usual streetcar to work yesterday and was rolling down 14th st. when a small delicatessen and some signs flashed by. She saw:

"Coffee—Sandwiches—Beer. Extra Long — Size 11 — 31 Gauge."

In a twinkling, it was too late for a second look. The delicatessen and the signs were gone, and for the rest of the day Gladys had an awful time trying to figure out what was "extra long"—the sandwiches, the coffee or the beer.

On the way home she took special pains to get to the bottom of the mystery, and was a little disappointed to find the previously missed "Nylons" sign (which explained everything).

It would have been so refreshing, she thought, if instead of this mundane ending she'd have found the nylons advertised in such fetching shades as pastrami, salami and kippered herring.

MISCELLANY

George Carboneau of 3417 New Mexico ave. nw., says that every time Old Man Winter looks this way, he begins to yearn for the icy slopes of Maine, and wonder how a fellow gets invited to join one of our local ski clubs . . . Jane Angel writes that she and her husband (Comdr. C. C. Angel, USN) are now settled at the U. S. Naval Ammunition Depot, Shumaker, Ark., "so please tell your circulation department to put us on the mailing list and reinstate us as District Liners" . . . Will do, you Angels—and hurry back to Washington as soon as you can . . . Speaking of subscriptions, Mrs. Herbert B. Wright of 408 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md., has been kept busy for the past few weeks by her kid sister (Esther Hirst) who is currently attending Southern Missionary College at Collegedale, Tenn. Esther is trying to win a prize offered by the school paper, "Southern Accent," so she's put her big sister to work selling subscriptions to graduates who now live in Washington. (Nostalgic alumni can call Mrs. Wright on Sligo 5993 after 7 p. m.) . . . Mrs. Salvatore Panarello of 165 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., is still chuckling at the recent news item which listed "Samuel Wexler, 21, his wife Margaret, 19, and their daughter, 21" . . . Birds from all over the country will be exhibited at the National Capital Canary Club's free bird show (November 12 through 14, Odd Fellows Temple, 419 7th st. nw.) . . . Lucy Waters Lonergan of the Cordova Apartments reminds Connecticut voters that there's still time to write to their town clerks for absentee ballots, which must be returned by 6 p. m., November 1 . . . Your vote might be very important. Remember what happened in Texas.

LAWYERS THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING, TRA LA

Ed Gallagher of 2201 42d st. nw. sends me a note which says:

"Near Thurmont (Md.) is an institution known as the 'Lawyer Hatchery.' It must be quite a sight on hatching day, with all the little fellows bursting from their shells and heading for Washington, brief cases under their wings, and chirping happily: 'To wit, to wit, to wit.' "

GIVEAWAYS

"Two heavy wooden garage doors; usable as is, or can be cut up for firewood." (North 7864, after 3 p. m.)

"Four cute, healthy, playful kittens, abandoned in our back yard." (Hobart 6973.)

LIVE AND LEARN

When a District Liner recently remarked about the listing "5 p. m. Indian time (7:30 a. m. EDT)" I displayed my ignorance by passing it along.

Five readers have teamed up to set me straight. The first four were John Babbis of 1209 B st. ne., George W. Hodgkins of 1832 Biltmore st. nw., J. W. of 5102 Hanna pl. se. and John W. Willis of 1728 Massachusetts ave. nw.

They pointed out that "in most countries, time differs by an integral number of hours from Greenwich time. But in some of the British dominions, a compromise involving half-hour differences has been adopted."

The fifth reader called up on the telephone, and told me "there are not only half-hour differences, but some of them run to odd numbers of minutes. If you have any intellectual honesty, you will be man enough to own up to your mistake."

"Fine," I said, "I didn't know that before. What's your name?"

"I'm not going to tell you my name," he replied. "You're the one who is expected to be intellectually honest."

Okay. Now I'm intellectually honest. Whatever that is.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

After we ran a recipe for "lamp" stew the other day, Edna H. Brightwell of 1201 Valley ave. se. asked me whether we recommended "lamp stew" as a light snack.

To our dismay, we also referred to a local lawyer as one who had "practiced here since 1630." A Leesburg, Va., correspondent quickly came back with:

"How much practice does a fellow need?"

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

I suppose you've heard about the fellow who was arrested for stealing from a fruit stand. The judge fined him $50 for impersonating a policeman.

CHERCHEZ LA FEMME

The young lady doesn't want her name used, but she swears this actually happened.

She was standing in the concourse at the Pentagon when a dignified gentleman walked up and said:

"Excuse me, but are you my wife?"

Startled, the young lady mumbled that she was pretty sure she wasn't, whereupon the stranger tipped his hat and, before withdrawing, politely explained:

"I'm sorry—I'm supposed to meet her here, and I haven't seen her for 12 years."

ANSWER TO QUIZ

According to my map, one might start in Maryland and drive straight west, crossing two other States (Virginia and West Virginia) and eventually return to Maryland.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Because of the scarcity of passengers traveling eastward—to Warsaw, Budapest and Bucharest—the famed Orient Express from Paris may be discontinued . . . In the dressing-room scene of "Inside U. S. A.," Beatrice Lillie sings snatches from "My Darling, My Darling," from the new musical, "Where's Charley?" . . . S. J. Perelman will take his wife and two children to Siam in January for a year. He's contracted to write a series of articles from there, and a book to be called "The Swiss Family Perelman" . . . Paul Moss, the former fight manager who now supervises the fight broadcasts for CBS, will promote the Tournament of Champions fights as soon as CBS and MCA take over.

At the Toots Shor luncheon for Harry Markson, the new managing director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, Boxing Commissioner Eddie Eagen told the sportswriters: "I always knew there was a good side to Markson because whenever I go to the opera I always see him there" . . . "Now," said Pat Robinson, "I know what's wrong with both of 'em."

Peggy Wood, who starred in "Bitter Sweet" for Sir Charles B. Cochran, gave a party for the visiting British producer this week. At the party she served Cochran Sherry, which is named for Sir Charles and bears his signature . . . Cochran toasted his assembled friends, lifted the glass of Cochran Sherry and said, "Anything I may do or have done in the theater is ephemeral; but to have a good wine named after you—that is something which will go on forever."

McAlister Coleman, running for Congress on the Socialist ticket against J. Parnell Thomas, made a speech in his district about Thomas' activities and their relation to civil liberties in America. Then candidate Coleman invited questions. One man, wearing a Republican button, held up his hand. "Fine," said Coleman. "We Socialists are always glad to answer questions about our fundamental philosophy and current program. Your question, sir?" . . . "What," asked the man, "is the Socialist Party's stand on bingo?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Don't Re-elect' List Given Voters

By Drew Pearson

En route Through Midwest.—Too many voters have the idea that once they pick a President every four years their voting job as American citizens is over. They don't seem to realize that no President, no matter what the party, can put across a program without an intelligent Congress.

Pearson

If Congress is made up of party hacks and hangers-on, chiefly interested in patronage and nepotism, almost any administration will bog down. With a view to sorting out the Congressional wheat from the chaff, therefore, here is the Washington Merry-Go-Round scorecard of Congress.

First, no attempt is made to evaluate Southern Democrats, since their real election comes in the primaries. These are the Congressmen who don't deserve to be reelected. Those who merit reelection will follow in a subsequent column.

Charles K. Fletcher, San Diego, Calif., Republican—tool of the real estate lobby, has been under Federal investigation for loaning money from his own building-and-loan association to build a hotel on land sold a contractor by the Congressman's father.

Robert F. Rockwell, Colorado, Republican—Though one of the wealthiest men in the State, he has put a local political leader, Crissa B. Pond, on the Government payroll at $292.93 a month, supposedly as a member of Rockwell's office staff.

Edwin A. Hall, Binghamton, N. Y., Republican—Has four members of his family on the payroll, from his father down to his 16-year-old son.

Leo Isacson, New York, Laborite—Never amounted to much more than a weak echo of Senator Glen Taylor and Representative Vito Marcantonio.

John Sanborn, Idaho Republican—Never opened his mouth in the House except to cast his vote with the hard-shelled isolationists who oppose Dewey-Vandenberg policies.

Frank Barrett, Wyoming, Republican—Darling of the big cattlemen even though he, himself, happens to be a sheepman. Fought against Jackson Hole National Monument because it removed some grazing land from the cattlemen in favor of scenic beauty.

Wint Smith, Kansas, Republican—Has been just as poor as a Congressman as he was an attorney for the Kansas Highway Commission.

Bert Gearhart, California, Republican—Has a consistent record in favor of the California wine interests, for isolation.

Horace Seely-Brown, Connecticut, Republican—A pushbutton party liner. Party leaders merely push the buzzer and Seely-Brown votes as they tell him.

P. W. Griffiths, Ohio, Republican—A do-nothing Congressman, who once admitted to newsmen that in four years he had never delivered a single speech.

Raymond Burke, Ohio, Republican—Travels at rocking-chair speed in an atomic age. Lets the GOP bosses do his thinking. Studious, kindly, his only accomplishment was a bill setting up Federal game preserves.

Robert McGarvey, Pennsylvania, Republican—Colorless. Backseat Congressman. Well-meaning, but a lightweight. Content to follow the House leadership.

C. W. Bishop, Illinois, Republican—Never should have given up tailoring for politics. His chief claim to notoriety is that when a group of Congressmen called at the Vatican he talked back to his holiness, the Pope.

Fred Crawford, Michigan, Republican—Acid-tongued, he is always talking his way into trouble; defiantly opposed admitting Hawaii into the Union because he didn't want to have a couple of "Jap" Senators; later reversed himself and supported both Hawaiian and Alaskan statehood. Created a furore by demanding that John Virden resign from the Commerce Department because his daughter worked for Soviet News Agency Tass; was forced to eat his words when it turned out Virden was a friend of the GOP. Divides his time between his office and a Maryland farm.

THICKER HAIR!
Hopeless Cases Are Never Accepted
Upon Nature's innate system of growth is based Hair Experts' specialized system . . . a plan that results in thicker hair, NATURALLY grown and nurtured to full strength and vitality with the aid of modern scientific formulae. First the scalp is thoroughly and professionally cleansed of its dandruff or other disorders, through special, gentle but effective germicides which penetrate below the skin surface to attack the source of passages.
Then when the basic cause of the scalp trouble is routed, Hair Experts begin the rejuvenating treatments that start to revitalize your hair and scalp to virile activity.
After energizing the papilla to action, and then creating a "fertile field" for that growth, Hair Experts' special formulae (scientifically created by and for them) stimulate the sub-scalp hair growth to normal, natural length, strength and thickness. Then sluggish blood circulation is normalized to flood the hair follicles with life-saving "food" for hair growth. DELAY is DEADLY, and leads to fatal follicle shrinkage! Once it has set in, your chances for thicker hair are practically negligible! Come in IMMEDIATELY for a free, private scalp examination. Relax under our pleasant, professional treatments and care and get ready to enjoy THICKER HAIR.
